

INDIANS TO SEIZE BRIDGE?

OTTAWA (CP) — Indians are threatening to seize the Interprovincial Bridge connecting Ottawa and Hull if Quebec continues to refuse to let them paint the Quebec side of the structure.

"We might take over the bridge," one of the Indian painters said Monday.

The Indians had considered a sit-in on the bridge Monday, but postponed it so they could study old laws and treaties relating to the rights of North American Indians.

"We don't want trouble, we are just here to paint," John Square, one of the Indian painters said.

The Indians were hired to paint the federally-owned bridge because of their skill in working at heights, but Quebec claims the Indian crew is not qualified to work as painters in that province.

The Indians are also unhappy because Quebec-qualified painters working on the Quebec side are earning about a dollar an hour more than they are. Painters are generally paid more in Quebec than in Ontario.

Ugandans Fleeing Massacre

NAIROBI (UPI) — Hundreds of Ugandans, including senior civil servants and army officers, have fled to Kenya to avoid a fresh "massacre" taking place inside the country in the wake of an assassination attempt against Idi Amin, the Kenya news agency said today.

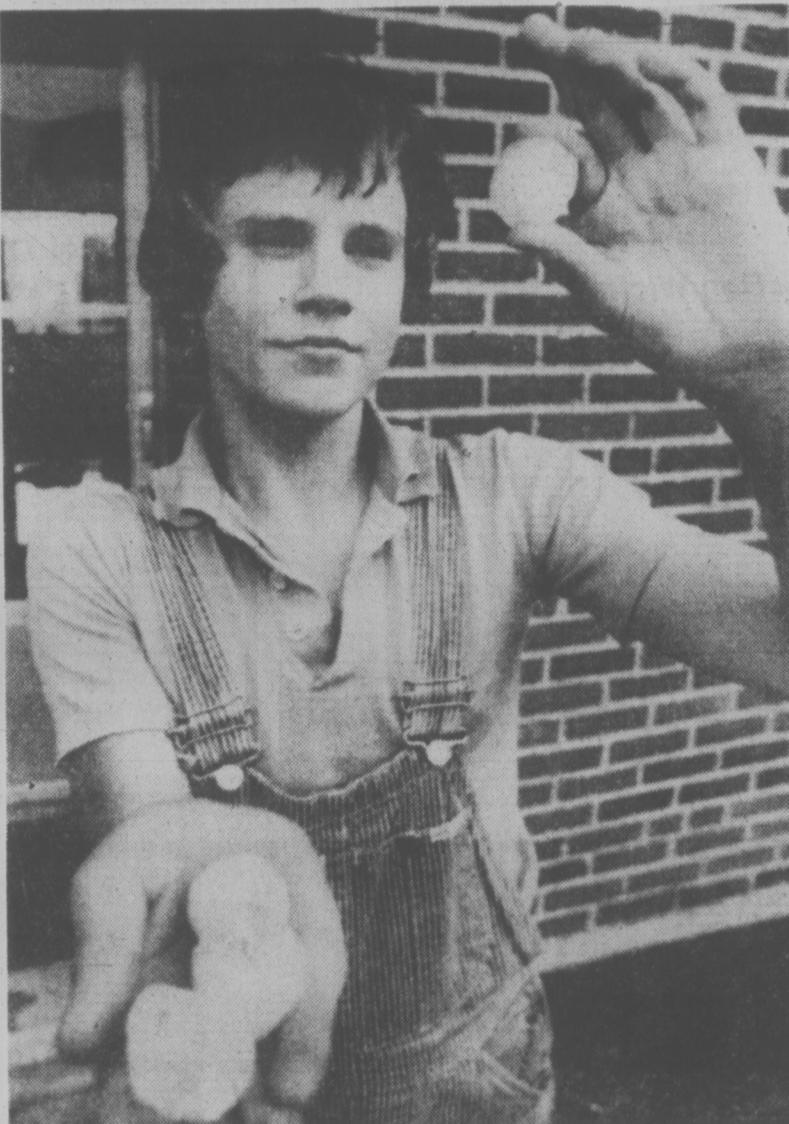

"Hundreds of Ugandans, including military and civilian personnel, have defected to Kenya, running away from certain death during the current purge in Uganda following an assassination attempt on President Idi Amin late last week," the government agency said.

It said Amin had been wounded during the ambush and quoted sources close to him as saying he had been hospitalized in Uganda.

Diplomatic sources in Kampala were quoted by the agency as saying there "certainly is a massacre taking place here."

Fleeing refugees were also quoted as saying the dreaded state research bureau had embarked on "a rampage of killings of innocent people and members of the armed forces suspected of having taken part in the assassination bid."

The Uganda cabinet met today at the mystery of Amin's whereabouts deepened. Entebbe statehouse officials said a dragnet to find him had been extended to foreign countries.

HAIL-STONES as big as golf balls fell Monday on the Toronto home of Dominic Farrell, 15, in a freak storm just one day in advance of the official beginning of summer.

A greatly-expanded Ombudsman Act covering local and provincial governments and all government agencies was introduced in the legislature Monday by Attorney General Garde Gardom.

The ombudsman, described by Gardom as the "conscience of the state" will have jurisdiction over all provincial government ministries, any corporation, commission, board, bureau or authority of which the government owns more than 50 per cent or where the majority of the board of directors is appointed by the government, municipalities, regional districts, the Islands Trust, public schools and colleges, universities, hospitals and the governing bodies of professional and occupational associations established by a provincial act.

Gardom first introduced the act in the spring, 1976 legislative session. The first act gave the ombudsman jurisdiction only over provincial ministries and corporations.

The attorney-general said Monday the act was changed to include local governments because "we wanted to have the best act possible."

But he indicated the ombudsman when first appointed will cover only the provincial ministries and the jurisdiction will be expanded gradually.

The enlarged jurisdiction is the only major change contained in the new act.

Gardom said he hopes to see the $52,000 a year ombudsman position filled by the end of the year. The job has a six-year term.

The person will be chosen by an all-party legislative committee, a process which took several months when set up to choose an auditor general.

Gardom described the ombudsman as a "citizen's champion, independent of the system, independent of the administration, independent of the civil service and independent of politics."

The ombudsman has the power to investigate any complaint made by a citizen or organization against any of the agencies under the jurisdiction of the act.

After investigation, the ombudsman can make any recommendation for a solution to the problem and can request that the authority concerned report back on the steps taken within a specified time.

The ombudsman can also publicize all findings and will make an annual report to the legislature as well as any other report considered necessary.

Gardom said the ombudsman will decide the size of staff necessary to do the job.

Only B.C. and Prince Edward Island do not have ombudsman and the size of other offices ranges from three in Newfoundland to 18 in Alberta, to 29 in Quebec to 110 in Ontario.

Gardom said he is looking forward to early passage of the bill and the appointment of a person "of integrity, skill and a profound sense of fairness to hang out his shingle."

Petro-Can Facing Gov't Axe

CALGARY (CP) — The federal government will reduce benefits for Petro-Canada, the government oil company, in proposing new legislation to be introduced soon in the Commons, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Monday.

In an address to the Canadian Association of Petroleum Landmen, he said the government released an outline of the proposed policy last year.

The government had hoped to have it passed into law during the winter sitting of the Commons but there was not enough time left in the session to consider the new legislation and regulations, he said.

If the legislation was introduced during the current sitting, it would take a year before it became law, Gillespie told the 600 association members.

He said when new regulations were proposed to replace ones removed in 1970, Petro-Canada had the right to acquire without cost a 25-per cent share in any permit up for renewal if no major or natural gas discovery had been made.

The proposal had been hotly opposed by the Canadian petroleum industry.

"We are now prepared to make Petro-Canada's right to secure a working interest in outstanding land conditional on the extent of participation by private Canadian interests in the venture," Gillespie said.

Gardom said the ombudsman will decide the size of staff necessary to do the job.

Only B.C. and Prince Edward Island do not have ombudsman and the size of other offices ranges from three in Newfoundland to 18 in Alberta, to 29 in Quebec to 110 in Ontario.

Merriam Doucet, chairman of the herbicide and pesticide committee of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control, said Monday she received a registered letter from Forests Minister Tom Waterford "that amounts to a threat."

Dr. David Clarke, public health officer of the South Okanagan region, said he was warned in an inter-office memo from Health Minister Bob McClelland not to speak publicly about effluent discharge and the proposed spraying of herbicide 2,4-D in Lake Okanagan.

Waterford earlier proposed spraying parts of the Fraser Canyon with carbaryl and orthene in an attempt to kill the spruce budworm. The plan was delayed a year for reconsideration after opposition from environmentalists and residents.

Nielsen recently announced the government's intention to use 2,4-D to kill millifoli weed in Lake Okanagan, a plan opposed by many, including Clarke.

Doucet said she received a letter from Waterford requesting information gathered during the seminar on budworm spraying held in April. But he had added, said Doucet, if the information was not forthcoming he would tell the public "to the detriment to your credibility."

"I take that as a threat," she said.

She said she would send the information which had been delayed by her involvement in the Okanagan issue and illness. She also said she would send a bill for the duplicating costs, which comes out of her pocket.

"Why is the onus on me to show the chemicals are harmful, when it should be on him to prove they're safe?"

Clarke said Sunday he had received a carbon copy of the office letter from McClelland to Environment Minister Jim Nielsen last fall in which McClelland wrote: "Reference is made to your memo of Dec. 13 in which it is drawn to my attention the director of public health (in South Okanagan) appears to be too vocal in regard to the weed problem in Okanagan Lake. ## PUSHED OVER WALL BY A STRANGER

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Ian Watt is in satisfactory condition in hospital with spine and arm injuries after he was pushed over a 28-foot wall by a stranger while he was waiting for a bus.

Police said Watt, 20, of Coquitlam, was standing at a bus stop when he was approached by a man who got out of a car apparently to ask directions.

The man didn't say a word but pushed Watt so violently that he hit the pavement 16 feet out from the wall, landing among broken glass.

He lay there for five hours with a fractured spine and pelvis, a broken arm and cuts and bruises.

Watt's mother said her son has no idea of what the assailant looks like.

GNP Showing Better Growth

OTTAWA (CP) — Total production in the economy rose at an annual rate of 5.2 per cent during the first three months this year, indicating a swing back to a relatively healthy but narrowly-based rate of real growth.

Statistics Canada reported today.

Meanwhile, the Canadian dollar dropped Monday to its lowest level since May 29, 1970, on New York money markets.

The dollar closed at $0.9435 in terms of United States funds after hitting $0.9415 U.S.

in midmorning, its lowest level of the day. It opened at $0.9454.

A trader with the Royal Bank's international money market said most recent trades in Canadian dollars have been to sell and added that 84 cents U.S. "could be the magic level."

"Since the end of May the dollar has been steadily setting a lower plateau," he said.

The federal agency says in its quarterly report on gross national product that the economic growth resulted mainly from a substantial increase in the value of exports that led to an improvement in the balance of trade in goods and services.

At the same time, the inflation rate slowed sharply to an annual rate of 3.2 per cent, well down from the 9.6 per cent inflation in the final three months of 1976.

The real recovery in economic growth follows a depressed final quarter last year when production declined at an annual rate of eight-tenths of one per cent.

The combined increase in prices and output caused GNP in current dollar terms to rise at an annual rate of 8.8 per cent to a seasonally-adjusted annual level of $199.9 billion.

Meanwhile, the U.S. economy expanded at an annual rate of 6.9 per cent during the first quarter, the fastest in three years.

The U.S. commerce department issued its final revised first-quarter figure for the GNP Monday. It estimated two months ago that the GNP had grown at an annual rate of 5.2 per cent during the first quarter.

"The Soviet Union wants to be so strong that no one will deal it the burning wounds it received in the last war and from which it is still suffering," Brezhnev said.

"The Soviet Union is simply placing itself in a defensive position," Soviet spokesman Leonid Zamatin quoted Brezhnev as saying following a three-hour meeting with Giscard at Chateau Ramboillet, 45 miles south of Paris.

"The Soviet Union wants to be so strong that no one will deal it the burning wounds it received in the last war and from which it is still suffering," Brezhnev said.

Open Space Shrinking

The amount of land proposed for open space in Colwood, Langford and View Royal is shrinking as residents will find Wednesday night at the latest view of a community plan now in the final polishing stages.

A public meeting scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in the Belmont high school cafeteria on Jacklin will show what regional planners have done to meet public criticisms of the draft plan voiced at meetings two months ago.

The plan, when finally approved by the Capital Region Board and provincial government, will set the growth pattern in the so-called western sector for the next 28 years. During that time population is expected to double to about 60,000.

Jim Masterton, a principal Capital district planner, said today that public comments on the draft plan were taped at the two public meetings in March. Criticisms have been reviewed and Wednesday's meeting will show what planners see as appropriate amendments.

Open space concepts are considerably smaller, he said.

There will also be a statement of objectives on staging development and providing services.

Several public meetings have been held over the past two years to give residents a chance to share in shaping the plan.

Masterton said the bylaw establishing the plan could be passed and be in operation before the end of this year.

Confusion On Hydro Logical - Bonner

By LIZ HUGHES

Times Staff

The public's confusion and anxiety about the ever-increasing size and function of B.C. Hydro is a "wholly understandable" reaction, Hydro chairman Robert Bonner said today. (Who is the boss of Hydro? See story on Page 36.)

The Crown corporation, described in the legislature as a monolithic giant running out of control, is by capital structure and function the largest corporate structure in Canada west of Ontario, Bonner said.

"And it's about as understandable to the average person as General Motors."

Bonner, speaking during Hydro's annual appearance before the public accounts committee of the legislature, said it is understandable that the public looks at Hydro and is confused.

The responsibility for natural gas and transit as well as electricity make it one of the large organizations of the North American continent, he said.

The Hydro chairman and former Social Credit government cabinet minister said he is puzzled about how to improve Hydro's image and reputation.

One reason why Hydro is so much in public notice, Bonner said, is that it is impossible for the corporation to make even the smallest move without directly affecting someone.

Hydro serves 917,000 electrical customers and 285,000 gas customers and "it's impossible for that number of people to be happy all the time."

Bonner said he welcomes legislation introduced earlier this year which would establish a permanent legislative committee with wide research support to keep an eye on Hydro and other Crown corporations.

But, he said, he can't think of any significant area in which Hydro is not responsible to the public laws of the province.

The suggestion that Hydro goes its own way is at variance with the meticulous laws of the province which the corporation must obey, he said.

THE OUTCASTS

BLACK RIOT BROKEN UP

JOHANNESBURG (UPI)

Police today dispersed hundreds of black students who marched on a police station at the black township of Attridgeville near Pretoria demanding the release of students arrested during demonstrations last week.

Anti-riot "hippo" vehicles were used to break up the march which began after senior students led children from lower grades at police who remained outside.

Students retreated to a nearby school, closed the gates and jeered at police who remained outside.

Boeing's Jetfoil Flying Fish had a successful 46-day test on the route last year.

The B.C. Steamship Co., operator of the Princess Marguerite on the Victoria-Seattle service, was co-operator of the Jetfoil in the test run last fall when the craft operated at 90 per cent capacity.

The other partner was Georgian Gulf Cruises, of Vancouver.

The jetfoil was put into service elsewhere following the test and Boeing indicated there were no others available for the international service in Puget Sound and Juan de Fuca Strait.

GARDOM WILL REVIEW 'CONNECTIONS' TAPES

Attorney-General: G. R. G. Gardom says his ministry will listen to tapes of undercover police conversations to see if any B.C. politicians are mentioned in connection with organized crime.

Gardom told the legislature during question period Monday that he has not heard tapes held by the Co-Ordinated Law Enforcement Unit, but he would investigate.

CLUE has, for more than a year, held the tapes of a conversation between MP John Reynolds (PC-Burnaby-Richmond-Delta) and a police agent posing as a Mafia figure.

Gardom said that as far as he knows, there are no other B.C. politicians involved with the tapes.

Smoking Ban Wins Toronto Approval

TORONTO (CP) — A bylaw to restrict or ban smoking in public places effective Oct. 1 was approved Monday by city council.

The bylaw bans smoking in stores, hospitals, banks, municipal offices, school buses, waiting lines and reception areas in offices.

Bank customers, for example, will not be allowed to smoke at any service counter of the bank. If the customer continues to smoke after being told not to, the teller has the right to refuse to serve him.

Owners or operators of theatres and other public assembly places must have a no-smoking section in at least half of their premises under the bylaw.

It is the responsibility of the proprietor of all types of businesses included in the bylaw to post No-Smoking signs and to enforce the bylaw with the help of the city's bylaw enforcement officers.

Violation of the bylaw carries a maximum fine of $1,000.

Suspected IRA Man Seeking Eire Help

A BITTER TREAT

PARIS (Reuter) — Thousands of Parisians had a free drink in their local bistros on Monday and they didn't like it one bit.

French cafe owners staged a two-hour "drink-in" to enable customers to taste a new mixture of coffee and chicory which the government — appalled at the soaring cost of coffee imports — hopes will woo the average citizen away from pure coffee.

'Cancer 5' Jailed

TURIN (Reuter) — Five men were jailed here Monday on manslaughter charges following the deaths of more than 130 workers at a dye factory near here.

Two of the owners of the IPCA dyes plant at Cirie were sentenced to six years in jail. A third owner received a three-year term, the plant's general manager four years and the factory doctor 4½ years.

During the last 20 years, 122 workers at the plant have died from confirmed or suspected cancer of the bladder and five more are suffering from the disease.

The families of 13 dead or sick workers brought the case to court. Nine other families withdrew from the case in return for compensation from the company, ranging from $2,700 to $12,400.

Witnesses told the court that workers at the factory frequently fainted while on duty and were revived by being taken out into a field and having buckets of water thrown over them.

Many complained of blood in their urine but the factory doctor said they should just "drink less and smoke less," the court was told.

Come and Check Front: Rhodesia Invites West

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — The government has invited British and American observers to Rhodesia to visit the troubled eastern border with Mozambique, and today arranged for foreign reporters to tour the area.

Telegrams sent to Washington and London Sunday followed charges by Mozambique President Samora Machel that Rhodesian troops' raids into his country amounted to an invasion.

Missionary Ousted

SALISBURY (UPI) — American medical missionary Dr. Selwyn Spray has been deported from Rhodesia, where he was held for more than two weeks on suspicion of aiding black nationalist guerrillas.

A government spokesman confirmed that Spray, 38, of La Grande, Ore., was put aboard South African Airways flight for London Monday night.

Security forces at the airport would not allow reporters to question Spray before he was put on the plane.

Spray's Swiss-Canadian wife, Rosina, contacted in Flawil, Switzerland, said, "I am relieved he is out of Rhodesia."

CIGARETTES WITH A DIFFERENCE

LONDON (UPI) — A British factory will soon start manufacturing cigarettes with a difference — no tobacco.

The factory, opened Monday in Ardeer, Scotland, is the first in Britain to manufacture smoking products made from a tobacco substitute, according to T. G. Garrett, chairman of Imperial Tobacco Ltd.

"This is an important milestone and marks a new generation of smoking products," Garrett said.

The firm plans to eventually extend production overseas.

Trudeau Right, Ramphal Says

By BRUCE LEVETT

LONDON (CP) — Shridath Ramphal, Commonwealth secretary-general, supported today the contention of Prime Minister Trudeau that Quebec had sought separate representation within the Commonwealth.

Trudeau also asked the question referred to Quebec as it exists within the Canadian Confederation or whether it was a hypothetical question covering a Quebec separated from Canada.

Ramphal replied: "He means right now. Otherwise, I should not have responded."

During the Commonwealth conference here earlier this month, Trudeau said Ramphal acted properly when he advised his questioners to talk to the federal government about getting a seat with the Canadian delegation on Commonwealth bodies.

Commonwealth rules allow membership only to sovereign independent governments.

Trudeau said at a news conference during the Commonwealth heads-of-government meetings that there already is provision for provincial representation on federal delegations to Commonwealth functions on such subjects as education.

"It's up to each sovereign country to decide how its delegation should be formed."

A Change of Heart

One of the hardest things for a government to do is to change its mind publicly, and for that reason the B.C. government deserves double congratulations for its new Ombudsman Act, introduced Monday in the legislature.

It deserves the congratulations first because the bill, at least on first reading, appears to be an excellent piece of legislation. It deserves them secondly because it has had the courage to change its mind publicly and expand the jurisdiction of the ombudsman to cover more than just the provincial government.

The bill itself contains numerous provisions to guard the independence of the ombudsman and to ensure that he can do his job as a protector of the rights of the individual against the bureaucracy and red tape of government. It also follows the system used to appoint the auditor-general: a person will be appointed only on the unanimous recommendation of an all-party legislative committee. This means it will be impossible for the ombudsman ever to become a political tool of the party in power. But most of those safeguards were incorporated in the original bill presented to the house last year but allowed to die on the order paper. The main difference between that bill and the new one lies in the jurisdiction of the ombudsman. Under last year's bill the ombudsman could have looked into matters dealing only with the behavior of the provincial government itself, its appointed commissions and boards, and crown corporations.

The new bill expands that jurisdiction to include also municipalities, regional districts, school boards and college councils, universities, the islands trust, hospitals and even governing bodies of professional associations such as the Law Society and the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Attorney-General Garde Gardom did not explain clearly the reason for the government's change of heart in this key area, but nevertheless, the change has to be a good one.

Through their control over such matters as land use and zoning, local governments can exercise considerable control over the lives and rights of individual citizens. School boards have an immense power over the lives of children through their supervision of the schools. Furthermore, citizens now often find they have fewer avenues of appeal open to them from decisions of these authorities than from decisions emanating from the legislative buildings.

Gardom has said the ombudsman will not be overloaded at the beginning and this may mean that his jurisdiction starts small and is gradually expanded to cover all the institutions listed in the bill. (This could be easily accomplished by having the act proclaimed by cabinet a bit at a time.)

This logic makes sense and it would be a pity to find the ombudsman not doing anything well because he has too much to do while setting up his staff and office. But the government must not use it for too long as an excuse to keep the ombudsman out of areas where he is sorely needed.

Too Much of a Good Thing

Human rights is a motherhood issue these days and no one would dare speak out other than against discrimination and prejudice. But a recent publication of the Manitoba Human Rights Commission proves there can be too much of a good thing — even the good thing of human rights.

The publication in question is a booklet put out for employers in Manitoba, offering guidelines on how to conduct hiring interviews without contravening the provincial human rights code. The code, somewhat similar to B.C.'s, prohibits discrimination in employment on the basis of race, nationality, religion, color, sex, marital status, ethnic or national origin, political belief, or family status.)

The booklet states that no employer may ask a potential employee the name and address of next of kin to be notified in case of an emergency. That might give away the fact that the person is married or single.

He may ask if a potential employee is willing to be transferred but not how many people would have to be transferred with him. That would give away his family status.

He may not ask if a person is a Canadian citizen because that might give away ethnic origin. The only possible question is "Are you legally entitled to work in Canada?" — a question that could lead to trouble for the employer if the potential employee is misinformed (or lying) on the point.

He may not even ask the color of an applicant's hair and eyes — although the Manitoba government asks that on its applications for drivers' licences.

Such prohibitions put so many hamstrings on employers that it will be a wonder if some do not tear the booklet in half and throw it in the wastepaper basket. By infuriating those affected by the code, the commission is doing far more harm than good since human rights ultimately should be maintained by community attitudes, not by petty regulations.

Playing Poker at the UN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — If anyone ever publishes a lexicon of Canadian diplomacy, two of the key terms will be "cautious optimism" and "middle ground."

Near the mid-way point of the UN's latest effort to write a treaty that would parcel out the riches of the oceans, Canadian officials say they are cautiously hopeful that a year-old stalemate on the issue of seabed mining can be broken.

At stake is not only who will do the mining and how the potential profits will be shared among the international community — but how it will affect land-based mines.

As the world's largest producer and exporter of nickel — one of the metals that would be extracted from manganese nodules on the ocean floor — Canada is critically concerned that its mining industry could be crippled.

Some Canadian officials use the term "middle ground" to describe the position Ottawa is pushing in tandem with the Group of 77, the name of the caucus of more than 100 developing countries taking part in the current session of the ongoing Law of the Sea Conference.

Nickel the Key

It would restrict growth in undersea mining for the nodules to half the annual increase in world demand for nickel. The other half of the increased demand would be met by land-based mines, such as those at Thompson, Manitoba, and Sudbury, Ontario.

Canada differs with the Group of 77 on only one point: Ottawa would permit seabed mining to meet the entire increase in world demand for an initial five-year period. Developing countries, in the interests of those who either have land-based operations or the potential to develop them, foresee no such period of grace when seabed mining begins probably in the mid-1980s.

Canada, as might be expected, describes its position as a "middle ground."

But that's not what you hear talking to delegates from a number of industrialized European nations and the United States.

Canada, in their view, is being obstinate and greedy. They choose their words more cautiously than that, but it's how their calibrated diplomatic phraseology translates in plain English.

"Why should a wealthy, developed country like Canada feel it has a right to a guaranteed, growing market for its nickel?" one diplomat asks rhetorically.

The American position is that the technological problems of undersea mining — and the resultant higher costs — would keep Canadian nickel cost-competitive in world markets into the next century.

Nickel in Canada is extracted from sulfide deposits, a relatively low-cost procedure. Seabed mining would more likely become cost-competitive with mining from laterite deposits, the type found in a number of developing nations.

In addition to wanting a guaranteed share of the growing world nickel market, Canada charges that the U.S. is trying to set an artificially high development target for seabed mining operations.

The Americans are continuing to push a and operating conditions for American seabed mining operations. U.S. companies currently hold the edge on seabed mining technology.

In a series of "not for attribution" interviews, conference delegates from several nations have suggested the U.S. and other industrialized countries — including Communist and non-Communist Europeans — could give favorable consideration to what is called the "Evensen proposal caps."

Norwegian delegate Jens Evansen, something of a Lester Pearson-style troubleshooter, has proposed parcelling out 75 per cent of the growth in nickel markets to seabed operations. That would leave 25 per cent of market growth for land-based mining.

It is understood the Americans are insisting there is "no way" they would accept a 50-50 split of new markets.

Canadian delegates, for their part, are said to have expressed unhappiness with the Evensen proposal.

UN conferences, however, are somewhat like poker games with everyone playing brinkmanship and going for broke. Although a country may be willing to compromise, it conceals its cards until the last possible moment.

Treaty Jeopardized

But even at the UN, where marathon talks are the rule, there comes the odd time when delegates — and the governments they represent — reach a collective conclusion that it's time for action.

This may be one of those rare times.

The current Law of the Sea talks — the sixth session within four years — have dealt almost exclusively with seabed mining questions since getting under way three weeks ago. The session adjourns in mid-July.

If we don't solve the seabed problem, the whole treaty hangs in the balance," notes J. Alan Beesley, Canada's chief sea law negotiator, reflecting a view of other delegation chiefs.

Failure to solve the seabed issues could jeopardize the other wide-ranging goals of the Conference: from controlling pollution, to protecting and sharing fisheries resources, to navigation rights and establishment of 200-mile economic zones.

While the UN might continue to talk for years, a continued stalemate would invite a hodgepodge of unilateral action — and raise new areas of potential political and military conflict. At a minimum, it would be a "starting gun" in a dangerous race to lay claim to a bonanza of seabed mineral wealth.

Proposed treaty formula that would compute demand increases at a level that Ottawa and many in the Group of 77 believe is excessive — that level, based on an historical average, is six per cent. Canada believes the past is not necessarily an indication of future trends and prefers a formula that would compute future growth at about 4.5 per cent a year.

There are indications the U.S. may be willing to budge on the six per cent figure, in return for concessions from developing nations that would permit easier access to the seabed.

No Doomsday

In a recent issue of the Times, E. D. Ward-Harris has written a very favorable review of G. N. Calvert's book on pensions and doomsday. It is unfortunate that Mr. Ward-Harris should have done so, as Calvert is one of a powerful financial group dedicated to destroying the concept of indexing of pensions.

Calvert's book states that there are reasons against indexing based on "social justice." It would seem to me that a real social justice can only be done by indexing to protect the pensioner against erosion by inflation. Almost every adult in the working stream is so protected through COLA or other adjustments. We've seen the minimum wage go from $1.50 per hour to $3 per hour in the past five years or six years; we've seen wages more than double in the past eight or nine years. Where then is the justice in discriminating against one segment of society as Calvert proposes?

In attacking the public service pension plan, G. N. (or Gloom 'N' doom) Calvert is at his misleading best. Such statements as "totally unfunded", "dangerous in their precedent-setting role", "unable to be justified on general principles" are common. And this has been echoed in the review, i.e. "there are no funds" in the federal pension plan. Time and again officials of the treasury board in Ottawa have made statements and shown copies of the public accounts which clearly show that this pension fund is now well over $7 billion. It is extremely well funded with funds coming in being more than four times the benefits that go out to pensioners. This is much sounder than many insurance company funds.

Calvert's argument really relates to the use which the Canadian government makes of the funds entrusted to it. This is a matter of management of the Canadian economy and should be the concern of the Canadian public as a whole and its elected managers. The borrowing from this pension fund is no different than the borrowing from the citizens at large through Canada Savings Bonds. We do not need rooms full of gold bricks or of $1,000 bills to have confidence in the value of a Canada Savings Bond. Nor should we doubt Canada's standing behind its commitments to the pension fund. This is not to say that the management of Canada could not be improved — it certainly could be.

Regarding the misleading suggestion about the ever-increasing burden on the taxpayer that public service pensions are, it needs to be pointed out that public servants have themselves put in $1.96 billion and have received $1.88 billion. This means no direct cost to the employer (or taxpayer) even if you chose to ignore the commitment by the employer to match contributions plus the accrued interest earned over several decades. It would be much more in keeping with Calvert's pious concern for social justice if he were to campaign hard for a much fairer interest rate for private pension funds, greatly increased contributions by employees (a large percentage of whom do not contribute at all), and improvements in vesting and portability. Calvert should campaign for indexing because it is the norm for most adults already! It really would demonstrate a sense of social justice to see the $100,000 per year top insurance and actuarial executives fighting for indexing of pensions for the general public with their average $5,000 or $6,000 per year pensions. One of Calvert's main worries is about the future burden on society some 40 or 50 years later when the number of pensioners relative to the working force may be much greater than it is now. Old Gloom 'N' doom is also wrong on that. Let's try this on for size. We have had close to 1,000,000 people unemployed in Canada recently and we have some 2,000,000 people retired. If we just for this exercise change the label on the unemployed to "retired", we have effectively increased the retired by 50 per cent and doomsday isn't anywhere in sight!

Surely society has an obligation to protect a pensioner and not steal from him under the cloak of non-indexing! — R. D. Barer, 2123 Sandowne Roads.

Bad Cess to Ye

In your editorial, No Aims for the Rich, you praise the Oak Bay council for standing firm in its decision to let private enterprises such as the Victoria Riding Academy and the Racquet Club sink or swim on their own in their efforts to provide recreational facilities for their "well-heeled members."

The idea of the Oak Bay council setting a good example in this regard is a rather sick joke in the light of the history of the council's failure to provide recreational facilities for its youth almost from its inception to the present day. For decades the council maintained Oak Bay's position at the bottom of the list of comparable Canadian municipalities in this regard. Surely their failure to provide facilities in the past was to a large extent responsible for the Racquet Club's expansion, and just as surely their belated entry into the field has eroded the club's membership base and caused their present financial difficulties.

My own children were victims of their incredibly insensitive and shortsighted attitude; there was no playing field, no park, no wading pool, no municipal facilities of any kind except a barren school ground within walking or cycling distance of our home until our children were well into their teens. Even in the depression of the 1930s my prairie home town provided 10 times what the Oak Bay council provided until well into the 1970s.

There are many parents like ourselves who joined the Racquet Club simply to provide the facilities that the municipality failed to provide. True free-enterprisers would have protested vehemently against governments intrusion into the private sector, with the resultant devaluation of their holdings, when the referendum for the Oak Bay centre was held. Rather, I suggest, the Racquet Club members voted in favor of it; too late for our children, perhaps, but maybe in time for our grandchildren.

So, to those squeezing, wrenching, grasping, scraping, clutching, covetous old councillors, and to editors with little sense of history, I say bad cess to ye. To those councillors, now departed, who failed so miserably in the past in their civic duty, I hope the fires of hell are melting your icy hearts. — N. K. Preston, 3321 Woodburn Ave.

Learning Too Late

The oldest member of our band is my grandmother. Her name is Julia Jim. She is still alive, and we believe her to be nearing her hundredth birthday or even past it; no one knows how old she really is. She originated from Qualicum, where she married my grandfather, Louis Jim, many years ago, as a young girl perhaps 14 or 15 years of age. Our people married young in those days.

She recalls Ladysmith Harbor, as it was then.

It was beautiful: it provided a variety of food for our people. Up the creeks could be found different kinds of fish. There was a creek for coho and one for dog salmon, and there was cod to be had here too, and crabs to make your mouth water; clams and little neck clams, and there was the native oyster that has been picked up out of existence. These incidentally were the reasons our people moved from the bay area to Shell Beach. The shells were so numerous they cut the feet of our ancestors when they pulled their canoes in or out of the water.

In the spring, when the salmonberries ripened, we came in our canoes to pick these berries that were so bountiful at the place you now call Ivy Green.

In the early spring the herring came to spawn in the bay. Now when they come they are killed by the mud that is churned up by the logging industry.

It is because of the economy and our own changed values: we are as much to blame for the pollution of our environment.

Otherwise we cannot bring back the harbor to its original state again, unless we all go back to the canoe as transportation. But we can start, and one way of doing that is becoming aware of our situation as human beings.

Learn again to live with our fragile environment.

As we changed our values we closed our eyes and hearts to what was happening to our environment. We told our elders to keep quiet when they told us where we were going wrong.

We told them we have gone to the white man's school; he has taught us what is right; your ways are no longer valid in this age. And so they closed their mouths, they no longer spoke; and so their ways died with them; and we reap what we have sown to our sorrow and to our children's children, if we do not rectify what already has been done.

We can no longer say to the white man, you did it, you clean it up. We are as much to blame because we allowed our values to be changed. — Alfred Louie, Councillor, Chemainus Band.

Cancerous Link Of Crime, Politics

In late 1975, a fascinating story was carefully buried in The Washington Post, almost ignored by the rest of the U.S. media and brushed aside in a footnote by the Senate committee investigating the CIA.

The story was about the close relationship between president John F. Kennedy and a beautiful woman who was also the friend of Sam Giancana and John Roselli, Mafia bosses who had been hired by the CIA to murder Fidel Castro.

Now more details of that hard-to-believe connection are available in Judith Exner's My Story.

Mrs. Exner's self-serving confessions, as told to Orid Demaris, will be dismissed as distasteful, seedy, unnecessary sensationalism, unfairly selective, salaciously gossipy, perhaps psychologically sick, All of which they are.

But there is a core of checkable truth to this story that exposes, for the first time from near the inside the cancerous connection tissue that exists to this day between the underworld, show business and politics.

Mrs. Exner, first met Frank Sinatra on Nov. 10, 1959, upon his invitation to spend a weekend with him in Hawaii. For more than a year, she was one of Frank's girls, part of the rat-pack section of the Hollywood crowd. On Feb. 7, 1960, she was invited to Las Vegas by Sinatra, and in Dean Martin's hotel suite found herself being introduced to presidential candidate John F. Kennedy.

Sinatra was evidently not possessive; Mrs. Exner says her affair with Kennedy began in New York on March 7, 1960, eve of the New Hampshire primary.

The following week Judy Exner flew to Miami at Sinatra's invitation. In his room was "Joe Fish," Joseph Fischetti, brother of dead Mafiosi Charles and Rocco Fischetti, and cousin of Al Capone. Sinatra, aware of her new Kennedy relationship, advised her "Get with it. Swing a little."

On March 27, as she was still puzzling over Sinatra's admonition to "wake up and realize what you've got in the palm of your hand," the singer introduced her to a man he called "Sam Flood," one of the aliases of Momo Salvatore "Sam" Giancana, mobster who had begun as driller for "Machine Gun Jack" McGurn, became Tony Accardo's chief lieutenant, and in 1960 was undisputed boss of Chicago's underworld, with extensive gambling interest in Cuba.

Thus, under Sinatra's aegis, began the most startling dual relationship in the history of crime and politics: for almost two years, one woman was simultaneously seeing the nation's most powerful mobster and the nation's most powerful political leader.

From the start, mobster Giancana knew exactly with whom he was sharing the young woman's affections. Since the appearance of power is a form of power, he was able to use his girlfriend's access to the presidential candidate, and later to the White House itself.

By WILLIAM SAFIRE

to make a lasting impression on his Mafia associates.

Kennedy myth-protectors can no longer deny the relationship "documented in dreary detail by Mrs. Exner and government records, but insist that it was pure coincidence, that the Mafia chief chosen by the CIA to assassinate Fidel Castro was Giancana, along with another close friend of Mrs. Exner's, John Roselli.

Mrs. Exner denies she was the go-between in this matter, but cites other instances where entertainers like Jerry Lewis and Eddie Fisher, terrified of mob power, used her to pass messages to Giancana.

Great fun while it lasted, as the young woman accepted gifts from the Irish Mafia and the real Mafia, one day reciprocating. They both smoked Schimmlippeninck cigars. I went to a jeweler in Beverly Hills and had two solid gold cigar cases made and gave them each one."

But the paper had to be paid. Through the Kennedys, she became a patient of the notorious "Dr. Feelgood," Dr. Max Jacobson, whose drug injections were exposed a few years ago by a journalist. Through Sam Giancana, she suffered close FBI surveillance, and was sent by the mobster to lawyer Sidney Cott.

He owns a 12,000-acre spread he is turning into pastureland for breeding livestock. With two partners, he is clearing 30,000 more acres to plant soybeans, coffee, corn and a huge swath of eucalyptus trees for pulp. And he bought yet another 6,000 acres for cassava, a starchy tuber he will convert into alcohol for use as fuel for motor vehicles.

"I told my father when I was a boy that he would live to see this land under cultivation," said the 41-year-old Borges, who was born and raised in the Cerrados. "Like everybody else, he thought I was crazy."

Brazil has emerged as an agricultural superpower, and this year it will be the world's second-largest exporter of agrarian products, behind only the United States. In no other country is there as much new land available for farming.

Korslak, whose mysterious showbiz-underworld links were exposed by another journalist

Skip the gossip and study the pattern that emerges: a series of links exist between underworld and political world through the world of show business.

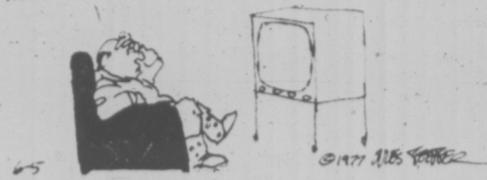

At J. Edgar Hoover's behest, John Kennedy finally dropped her (she denies that), after her usefulness as a White House link ended. Giancana and Sinatra drifted away. Of Judy's friends, Jack Kennedy was shot, possibly in retaliation for Sam Giancana's Cuban efforts. Giancana was executed by the Mafia just before he was to testify; John Roselli was murdered afterward.

Brazil: The World's New Farming Frontier

the rural sector, including the following:

Domestic food prices have been so high they have even run ahead of the country's soaring inflation rate, which last year was above 46 per cent, and have greatly aggravated the widespread malnutrition among the poorest Brazilians.

According to the Ministry of Social Assistance, of 800,000 urban residents hospitalized in the first half of 1975, at least 120,000 were children suffering from malnutrition. The situation is even worse in many rural areas.

Despite these deficiencies, agriculture in Brazil is enjoying its moment of greatest euphoria and the enormous potential of new frontier areas, particularly the Cerrados, has created widespread optimism.

At first sight, the Cerrados, covering most of Goias and large parts of such neighboring states as Mato Grosso and Minas Gerais, appears an unlikely area for an agricultural boom.

Grassy savannas and rolling hills give way to dense scrub forests of gnarled trees in strange poses, as if struck by lightning during the electrical storms that regularly scourge central Brazil. The soil has traditionally been considered poor, with high acidity and low phosphate content.

Perhaps nowhere in the world are large farmers as encouraged people like Borges from the start.

Borges confesses that he has always tried to picture himself as a pioneer, a long tradition in his family. He counts among his relatives some of the original settlers of this area of western Minas Gerais.

Some went on to explore and settle the Mato Grosso, farther to the west. Another relative was the first rancher to import from India the humpbacked zebu cattle, which now dominate the Brazilian herds.

But towns like Patrocínio stagnated and remained watering holes for prospectors and farmers pushing westward to more fertile lands.

Risk Low

Borges, like many sons of farmers fallen on harder times, turned to urban professions.

The generous government agrarian policies of recent years have brought many businessmen into farming, particularly those who grew up in a farm environment.

Risks are so low and profits so high that businessmen at cocktail parties are more likely to be overheard exchanging tips on agricultural investments than on the stock market.

"I have put all of my money in land here," said Borges. "If the government had not backed me, I would have placed my savings into real estate or some other form of speculation."

By government backing, Mr. Borges means that he could turn to state banks for loans at interest rates below the rate of inflation. He can receive grace periods of two or three years and up to 12 years to repay some of the loans. Mr. Borges estimates the government will end up financing more than 80 per cent of his investment in the Cerrados. And he expects to be able to pay back these loans out of profits after only five more years.

He bought most of his land five years ago at about $8 an acre; today, it is worth about $60 an acre. This sharp increase is due in part to the improved roads built by the government in recent years, connecting the once-isolated Cerrados to Belo Horizonte and São Paulo.

The land's value has also shot upward because of the discovery nearby of huge deposits of lime and phosphate, which can improve the soil's fertility at much lower cost than was initially thought possible.

Mundane Days on Nile

He was wearing polyesters. She found that musingly appropriate. Her laughter cut him to the quick, which surprised her. She didn't suspect him of having a quick. She thought he had styrene. That was why, until now, she had not tried to cut him. She couldn't stand the sound of metal piercing styrene.

He was disenchanted. Her laughter had revealed that her gums contained quantities of metal alloys and encouraged him to examine her critically. Her vision was supported by plastic lenses. The splendid tint of her hair came from a chemical factory. Her admirable chest structure was thoroughly admirable that he suspected it was silicone.

How artificial he is, she thought. His polyester necktie, his polyester shirt, his polyester suit, his polyester socks, his polyester shoes and his polyester conversion.

"So you are the famous Cleopatra," he said.

"Yes," she said.

"And that is the famous Sphinx," he said.

"No," she said. "That is the famous Great Pyramid of Cheops."

"You don't say," he said. "In any case, I am the famous Mark Antony."

She was aware that he wanted to perspire intensely, but could not. Under his polyester, she realized, he had coated his belt with an aerosol spray that would keep him dry for another 18 hours. In the arid heat of the Nile, he would turn to dust and blow away unless he soon received an infusion of liquefied chemicals.

He wanted to get rid of her and get back to Rome, where they had air-conditioning and low-calorie cola. He would never have come to Egypt in the first place if Caesar had told him Cleopatra was on her second face lift. And she had the nerve to laugh at his polyesters.

It made him so angry that for one pained instant he was afraid he would start sweating and smell like a human being. If that happened and they heard about it in Rome — well, men had been kicked out of the triumvirate for a lot less.

He read his mind like an open book. It was a mind, she realized after page 2, that would never give Irving Wallace any competition at the airport bookshop. She flicked the pages to the obligatory sex scene. It concerned an airline stewardess, who had dental caps the size of piano keys, and the ruthless middle-aged executive of a powerful triumvirate, who employed a macabre assortment of electrical gadfly to exultant effect. Cleopatra realized that nothing was possible between her and Mark Antony. The Nile Electric Company's nightly power failures were to fall into the hands of the Medes and the Persians, perverted science might enable them to achieve Mark Antony parity with Rome in a matter of weeks.

He watched his weight like a hawk lest he lose a single milligram for this woman to pocket clandestinely for sale to enemy science. He had decided to depart Egypt by the time he finished his cup of chemicals.

Cleopatra was pleased to see the back of him as he jogged toward Rome to keep his cholesterol in balance. Unfortunately, she knew he would return bringing polyester for all Egypt. And so she took up the asp he had left her as a farewell present, but it did not bite her, being made of flexible plastic.

"Last night, I lost a pound and a half," he told her. "Right off the midriff. It slipped down my leg, stole a car, held up a bank and shot two ounces of supporting actors before 18 pounds of dieted policemen cornered it in the Temple of Jupiter."

"Have some decaffeinated coffee," she suggested.

"You take sugar?" asked the waitress. "Artificial sweetener, please," said Mark Antony.

"Milk?" asked Cleopatra.

"Non-dairy product," he said. She watched him drink his non-coffee after stirring in his non-sugar and non-milk, and wondered what the chemical formula for him would look like on a blackboard. He watched her studying his chemical composition and, for the first time, distrusted her. If the secret of his carbon chain and his sodium count were to fall into the hands of the Medes and the Persians, perverted science might enable them to achieve Mark Antony parity with Rome in a matter of weeks.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Judge Fred Green is expected to announce his verdict today in Victoria provincial court in a case against Frederick Morran Waller, Victoria's city clerk for 38 years before his retirement last Nov. 30.

Waller, 60, of 813 Lawndale, is charged with impaired driving and having a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent after Oak Bay police stopped Waller in the early morning hours of March 27, 1976.

The trial on the two-year-old charges was finally completed Monday and Green said he wished to reserve his decision until 2 p.m. today to review some of the evidence.

During Monday's testimony, Waller said that he was at work March 26, 1975, during a strike-lockout situation at city hall and then went to Uplands golf club at about 7:45 p.m.

He said he and three friends began playing cards and drinking, finishing at about 4 a.m. the next day. Waller testified that he had "five or six" drinks until midnight when the bar closed.

Waller also admitted two previous convictions for drinking-driving offences, in January, 1970, and in July, 1971.

Ken Kenyon, manager of Continental Furniture and one of the three men playing cards with Waller, testified that Waller "might have had three or four drinks" during the session and that he didn't drink after midnight because none was available.

Kenyon said he left Waller at about 4 a.m. and drove directly behind Waller along Cadboro Bay Road, Lansdowne, Foul Bay Road and Fort Street. Approaching Fort Kenyon said he spotted a police vehicle making a U-turn to come behind the two cars. Kenyon said he pulled alongside Waller and gave him a wave as he (Kenyon) was about to make a right turn while Waller proceeded straight ahead.

"There was absolutely nothing the matter with his (Waller's) driving," Kenyon said in response to a question by defence counsel Dermot Owen-Flood.

Kenyon went further to say that he would have driven Waller home if there had been, as he has done in the past.

Kenyon also said that Waller was playing a form of gin rummy which required skill with some highly-skilled players "and he was the winner."

In his closing arguments, crown counsel Richard Law made reference to the events having occurred more than two years ago and said police officers who testified had notes to follow while civilian witnesses hadn't. He reminded the judge of testimony that Waller's car went over the centre line of the road twice in a quarter-mile stretch when police followed him.

An American who travelled with a circus midway which came to Victoria for the Jaycees Fair last month was sentenced to a year in jail by Judge Blake Allan.

Harold Allen Lapointe received five concurrent sentences of 12 months each and three concurrent sentences of eight months each for six break-ins and one charge each of being unlawfully in a dwelling house and possession of a stolen pawn ticket and money.

Lapointe, who authorities in the United States said was 23 but claimed to be 20, pleaded guilty May 26 to the charges and was remanded in custody until Monday for a presentence report.

Ken Kenyon, manager of Continental Furniture and one of the three men playing cards with Waller, testified that Waller "might have had three or four drinks" during the session and that he didn't drink after midnight because none was available.

Future Pope?

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Bishop Giovanni Benelli, 56, considered the power behind the papacy, has emerged as a contender to succeed Pope Paul VI. The Pope recently named Benelli archbishop of Florence and will elevate him to cardinal on June 27, putting him on what Vatican observers view as the necessary route to become the Roman Catholic pontiff.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver will embark on a two-year experiment July 4 to speed up criminal court cases and cut the cost of legal aid.

Court Speed-Up Plan Set

She said the other participating city, Winnipeg, started its project this month.

Prowse said the system isn't really new for Vancouver either, as such agreements between defence and Crown lawyers were understood to be preferred by judges. But short-staffing in the prosecution's offices resulted in a breakdown of that understanding, she said.

A full staff in the prosecution office is anticipated by early fall. The system also calls for the hiring of two special prosecutors to co-ordinate pre-trial discovery. One will handle provincial courts, the other, federal.

To encourage co-operation of defence lawyers, she said, "compensation is planned, probably at an hourly rate."

The new system, called Pre-Trial Discovery, will limit trial hearings to issues where disagreement exists. Both prosecution and defence will decide what is not necessary to prove in court.

Janet Prowse, one of two prosecutors responsible for running the project, said similar projects had been successful in cutting costs in Ottawa and Montreal, but had been a failure in Edmonton.

However, she emphasized that the Edmonton project's failure was due to exceptional circumstances.

"Edmonton already had an informal system of pre-trial discovery and counsel (defence lawyers) simply ignored the new, more structured method and went back to the old," she said.

DENTURE PAIN?

Abesol relieves denture pain fast. Cools, soothes and helps prevent infection.

lawyers realized the department intended to put through legislation that would cut the cost of legal aid.

"The federal government is deadly serious about cutting down costs and if they find defence counsel is not cooperating (in the projects) they are seriously thinking about settling up a public defender system," she said.

A public defender system would replace legal aid with a staff of lawyers paid by government salary to handle cases for persons eligible for free legal services, she said.

One lawyer voiced concern that such a system would result in a lower quality of legal aid for the poor because "the best people" would not be attracted to the "salary they could expect."

Prowse said, however, that she is not against the idea of a public defender system. She said her only concern was that other cost-cutting methods should be seriously tried by all concerned so that a decision is not made by default.

Bruce Donald, senior prosecutor and overseer of the project, said they system is intended to cut down the number of court cases now clogging the courts.

Remarkable Taste Achievement

"Gentled Tobacco" reaches a new smoking plateau where lightness actually improves flavour.

The age of taste without harshness is here. Fine, full-flavoured tobaccos, gentled and blended as never before, give Export 'A' Lights flavour-and-lightness levels never thought possible in one cigarette.

With the development of this breakthrough cigarette, the long-standing belief that harshness must accompany full taste has been shattered.

Until Export 'A' Lights you had to make a choice between flavour and lightness. Now both are yours in one cigarette. Full flavour with a light smoke. It's the one cigarette that's just right.

Watergate Case Closed, at Last

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Watergate case was closed Monday.

The investigation sequence that began just over five years ago when guard Frank Wills called the cops because he found black electrical tape holding open a basement door in the Watergate office building ended Monday as the Special Watergate Prosecution Force went out of business.

The files, the famous tapes of Richard Nixon, the correspondence, the dead ends and the loose ends all were placed in gray cardboard boxes. They were sent to the National Archives and some of them — but very little that's new — will be open to public examination.

The prosecutors presented evidence to a grand jury that named the president of the United States an "undictated co-conspirator in covering up White House participation in the break-in. Nixon resigned facing certain impeachment. He was pardoned by his successor, Gerald Ford.

The former attorney general of the United States, John Mitchell, and the former White House chief of staff, H. R. Haldeman, will be in jail by Wednesday. Another top Nixon aide, John Ehrlichman, already is in prison.

The prosecutors presented evidence that convinced a U.S. District Court jury to convict them of conspiracy.

Four are still seeking a pardon: Bernard Barker, Virgilio Gonzalez, Rolando Martinez and Frank Sturgis.

WASHINGTON (WP)
The U.S. Senate appropriations committee Monday laid down its challenge to President Carter by approving bills in its big labor-HEW money bill that went $588 million above program levels contained in last week's House-approved version of the measure.

The committee's action is bound to draw criticism from the president, who only reluctantly accepted the House bill that contained $1.4 billion more for HEW than the Senate approved.

In withdrawing his objections to the House bill, the president had got House Democratic leaders to agree to keeping the final version of the measure close to the House figure.

As of last week, however, the White House had done little in the Senate aimed at cutting its version of the bill.

When during Monday's session acting appropriations committee Chairman Warren Magnuson (Dem.—Wash.) was reminded by Sen. Lawton Chiles (Dem.—Fla.) that the Senate bill was far above the president's request, Magnuson replied, "This bill has been vetoed five times before."

"I'd hate to see us vetoed by a Democratic president," Chiles said, to which Magnuson responded, "I don't know if that makes much of a difference or not."

Women who use the artificial sweeteners do not have a higher rate of bladder cancer, the study says.

The FDA ordered the ban on saccharin in March after a Canadian study found the sweetener caused cancer in rats.

Saccharin users protested against the ban, saying it would be harmful to diabetics and weight watchers. This led the FDA to modify it to allow individual sales.

Hearings are expected soon in the U.S. Congress on a bill to delay the saccharin ban for 18 months to allow further study.

The FDA wants to ban saccharin in foods and drugs but plans to allow it to be sold to individuals without a prescription. A spokesman said a June deadline for public comments might be extended to get reaction to the new Canadian study.

The FDA found men who use saccharin and cyclamates have a higher chance of getting bladder cancer than men who do not use the sweeteners.

The Best Value in Victoria
On Laetrile

WILMINGTON, Del. (UPI)

Cancer patients in Delaware now can use laetrile, but Gov. Pierre S. Du Pont said he doubts that the substance will do much good.

Du Pont, who signed legislation Monday that legalizes the manufacture of the drug, said he does not regard laetrile as a cancer cure. But he added he sees no reason why the federal government should ban a substance which has been proven harmless.

"I want to caution those who suffer from cancer that laetrile is not a magic cure," he said. "The only appropriate treatment of the disease is by an early diagnosis and guarded care."

Laetrile, which is cyanide, has been shown to be effective in the treatment of cancer, but it is also a powerful poison.

ESQUIMALT TO RULE ON TOWNHOUSE PLAN

Esquimalt council will decide Monday whether to give an acre of land bordering E and N Railway tracks special development status to allow construction of a 10-unit townhouse complex.

The area between Lampson and Condor is vacant and is described as difficult to develop but suitable for the proposed purpose. Council has the option of allowing G. S.

NIP Planners For Esquimalt

A select committee of residents will be chosen shortly to start the planning of Esquimalt's second Neighborhood Improvement Program covering $300,000 worth of projects.

Co-ordinator Ed Alexander said today interested people in the Colville-Craigflower area may offer to serve on a steering committee which will survey housing, sift opinions and make recommendations to upgrade housing.

Council's planning, zoning and housing committee Monday received a report by Alexander which outlines the program encompassing about 450 homes within these approximate boundaries:

Colville, Tillicum, Craigflower, Ellery, Fairview, Viewfield, Lampson, Wurtele, Lockley and Admirals.

Senior governments approved $300,000 for the program, $200,000 less than Esquimalt asked for. As a result, about 350 homes were dropped from the proposal, largely within two areas: streets north of Craigflower and the Woodway-Grenville-Effingham-Drake neighbourhood.

Vic Press Raise Reduced by AIB

The federal Anti-Inflation Board has rolled back negotiated wage increases for Victoria Press employees by four per cent.

The Joint Council of Newspaper Unions, representing employees in five unions at the morning Colonist and evening Times, had negotiated with the company for a 22-per-cent wage increase during the term of a 29-month contract.

However, the AIB, in a ruling announced Monday, said the 250 employees would not be allowed to exceed the basic guideline of 18 per cent.

As a result a scheduled increase of four per cent July 1 will be reduced to two per cent. The company and unions met today to decide at what stage the other two per cent will be cut.

The contract was ratified last November and was retroactive to July 1, 1976. It expires Nov. 30, 1978.

The unions, supported by the company, had asked the AIB to approve a wage increase over the guidelines in exchange for the Victoria Newspaper Guild and the Victoria Typographical Union removing contract language prohibiting the introduction of technological change.

Roger Stonebanks, council co-chairman, said the AIB has, in effect, "ripped off" the employees for four per cent, which he said would be won back as soon as the federal guidelines are removed.

"We have an amicable, realistic settlement supported by the company, supported by the unions, and we have this bureaucracy in Ottawa, because of rigid guidelines, suggesting we don't know what we are doing," he said.

General manager Jack Melville said in the past the same increase given to the union employees has been passed on to the non-union staff.

Therefore, he said, it is likely that the non-union employees will be denied the extra four per cent as well, consistent with the AIB ruling.

The contract was ratified last November and was retroactive to July 1, 1976. It expires Nov. 30, 1978.

TOWN TALK

Puns, earthiness, corny jokes and sheer vulgarity — they're all to be found in the names of B.C. companies.

Among those registered with the B.C. Registrar of Companies, a prize winner in the vulgar category would surely be Little Brick Shirt House Ltd., with Kats-Sass Hauling and Godawful Logging Ltd. running a close second.

And let's not overlook Buns in the Oven Bakery Ltd. and Fanny Pincher Holding Ltd.

For planning preposterous punning it would be hard to beat Arrow Dynamics Inc., while Bam Bam Explosives Ltd. would probably appeal to lovers of onomatopoeia.

What prudent investor would want to sink his money in a firm titled Swaydell and Stole Enterprises Ltd.?

And somehow the name Fudpucker International Airlines Inc. doesn't inspire confidence, "International" or not.

Then there's the intriguing Waki Waki Telephone Service Ltd., Butt-Ox Holdings Ltd. and Super Studs Ltd.

Tum Tum Development Ltd. conjures up visions of a firm dedicated to encouraging gluttony.

And perhaps the most esoteric of them all is the splendidly titled Independent Designers of Eminently Applicable Surfaces Ltd.

By George, that's a prize worth having.

The George in question is 27-year-old Peter George, a Victoria clothing store employee, who has won $20,000 in the latest Western Canada lottery draw.

There are no firm plans on what to do with the money, but his wife says the first priority is a holiday. "We're quite excited," she added.

The couple have a young son.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett got a little worried by one of the threats made against him by a Social Credit MLA in the legislature this week.

During one of Barrett's speeches, Socred Ray Loewen (Burnaby-Edmonds) started heckling the former premier, calling him the "late premier."

Barrett immediately complained to the committee chairman that Loewen's comments, in view of his occupation as an undertaker, constituted a threat.

"He's running around after me with a tape measure," Barrett complained.

With summer water supplies in doubt for many parts of B.C., a woman called in amazement over the way City of Victoria parks staff apparently wastes water.

She cited the Pandora-Johnson area near where she lives, and where some boulevard grass was newly seeded in the spring.

"Going to work at 6:30 this morning, I thought it must have poured all night—the streets were drenched. But when I went home at 2: the water was still running."

How long it had been sluicing away she didn't know, but she didn't think it was necessary to use so much.

No, said the man in the mixer shop of the Yates Street liquor store, you can't buy sugarless gum here any more.

The powers that be have decided, he said, that it's not good for you. No matter that any saccharin ban doesn't arrive until later this year.

Could that be? Could any outfit selling booze have the cheek to decree that sugarless gum is bad for you?

Chewing furiously, Town Talk looked into it and discovered that the Liquor Administration Branch is not that cheeky. Keith Warnes, in charge of such matters with the branch, explained that what such shops and kiosks stock is up to the people who operate them.

For a moment there, we almost swallowed our gum.

Lighthouse philosopher Bill Scott, a card-carrying member of the NDP, has challenged party leader Dave Barrett to a public debate on the question of government funding of private schools.

Scott is for it and Barrett is against it.

"I realize I am only a pawn and Mr. Barrett is a king but you must remember that in chess the pawn must make the first move. That is why I am issuing this challenge. I think my leader is wrong because the teaching is better in private schools than in the public school system."

It's true that in chess a pawn may challenge a king but making a capture, without the aid of larger pieces, is very difficult.

There's a strange example of corporate thinking in a letter from CP Telecommunications to Victoria city council.

Seeking permission for the erection of a 200-foot micro-wave tower on property at Harbour Road, the letter says the site will be kept clean and in good condition, adding that it should be "an asset to the community."

The inference is that the "asset" lies in the tower's esthetic appeal, rather than its functional efficiency.

Presumably the company has an ingenious method of beautifying or disguising the lousy structure so that it blends harmoniously with its surroundings. How about planting a creeper at the base, for instance?

RJH NURSE IN TOKYO

'Super Friendly' But Food Terrible

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The people were great but the food was terrible.

That's the way Pat Macintyre, 20, a second-year student nurse at the Royal Jubilee Hospital, remembers Tokyo after spending eight days in the Japanese capital.

Macintyre and Linda Hughes, a student nurse at Douglas College in New Westminster, represented British Columbia at the recent 16th quadrennial congress of the International Council of Nurses, attended by 10,000 nurses and student nurses from 87 countries.

While the congress was stimulating and a challenge, the short immersion into Asian life has had an equally strong impact.

The two Canadians were housed with the Japanese contingent at the Tokyo Youth Centre, built as the Olympic village in 1968.

Macintyre reported it wasn't until the third day that she plucked up courage to join the Japanese in their communal bath.

"They showed us the ritual and we found it was fun. It's a social event. People gather there to discuss the day's events," she said.

The Japanese, particularly the older ones, tend to look on Westerners with "curiosity and a little bit of suspicion."

"They should see the ritual and we found it was fun. It's a social event. People gather there to discuss the day's events," she said.

While enthusiastic about the food, Macintyre lost six pounds trying to adjust to their diet. A typical breakfast was raw fish and rice with seaweed salad on the side. Lunch might be rice with more fish, this time dipped in raw eggs.

Except for the Tokyo branch of McDonald's, all the hamburgers sold are of soya beef meat. This is understandable when Macintyre reports ground beef selling at $9 a pound and steak at $20.

"For dessert you'd get something like cut-up jelly fish. Everything tastes of fish, even their candy," she says.

Macintyre, reported the congress, one of the largest to be held in Asia, received tremendous packing from the Japanese officials with even the emperor, empress and prime minister attending to welcome them.

There were five official languages — English, Japanese, German, Spanish and French.

Japanese student nurses were always at hand to help as interpreters, a different colored scarf denoting which language they could speak.

"The ones that spoke English wore pink so we always looked for them," she recalled.

She confesses it will be some time before she sorts out all her impressions. At this moment, however, it's the friendliness and cleanliness of Tokyo that probably ranks the highest.

"Tokyo is very large, massive but orderly. It's very clean, probably cleaner than Victoria," she said.

Oak Bay, Saanich Back Industry Man

Greater Victoria's four core municipalities now favor establishing an economic development commission for at least a year.

Both Oak Bay and Saanich unanimously voted to financially support the commission on Monday night. Earlier, Oak Bay had voted against the project but council changed its mind Monday after Victoria Alderman Frank Carson and Larry Ryan, as well as Conservative leader Scott Wallace appeared before council.

"We don't want to create a bureaucracy," he said.

The Capital Region Board, when asked for support, declined because such support had not been allowed for in its budget, Carson said.

Carson said the regional board has indicated it may consider financial assistance to the municipality next year.

Victoria and Esquimalt had earlier voted to support hiring an economic development commission.

The total cost of operation for one year is $63,000. The provincial government has promised to pay half of this for the first year of the operation with the municipalities paying the remainder.

Carson told both Oak Bay and Saanich councils that Greater Victoria has lost 4,000 jobs and should try to get such establishments as a police college, school of optometry and poison evaluation laboratory located in this area.

Ryan told the council's 10,000 of Greater Victoria's 102,000-member work force is unemployed. Departing industries had led to the erosion of jobs, he said, adding the commission will face a "fairly formidable task" in retaining existing industry.

Ald. David Paterson noted the main objective is to provide jobs. "I don't believe that Victoria is on a crusade to increase their tax base," he said.

Ald. Ian Cass said he considered the normal cost-sharing formula should be changed for the project because "there's a much better potential for the city of Victoria to derive the biggest benefit."

On Paterson's motion the council agreed to pay up to $15,000 for its share of the first year of operation.

Ask The Times

Q. What's the most poisonous snake in the world? A friend says it's the Asian krait. I say the mamba. Who is right? G.B.

A. You're both wrong. The world's most venomous snake is believed to be the sea snake Hydrophise belcheri found in the Timor Sea off northwestern Australia. The most venomous land snake is also Australian — the peninsula tiger snake, native to Kangaroo Island in Spencer's Gulf, South Australia.

It looks as if it's game over for the Racquet Club of Victoria in its bid to get a grant from Saanich to bail it out of its financial dilemma.

Saanich council voted Monday to table until July 4 a proposal to give a $21,526.95 grant in lieu of the club's school taxes.

The delay was made at the request of Mrs. Bette Wilcox, who wrote council she will have "many thousands of names" on a petition opposing the grant.

Several aldermen spoke Monday against the club being given the grant.

Ald. Fred Severson, a former member of the club, said while he believes the provincial government should run the school tax off non-profit organizations, he does not agree with the grant.

He suggested that the municipality help the club by paying for use of the club's facilities by the general public at certain hours.

Severson said this type of financial help had been offered in 1976 but the only time available was unsuitable — midnight to 6 a.m.

"It is a private club and should pay what assessment is established and what payment is on it," said Ald. Ed Lum, agreeing with Severson's suggestion that services be bought from the club.

He had since read that this is not the case.

"If, in fact, it remains an exclusive club, I'm utterly opposed to giving a grant to an exclusive club," he said.

Ald. John Mika said he had earlier supported the grant because of conditions laid down that the club would become an open club with people being able to become members without buying the $1,000 share normally required.

He had since read that this is not the case.

"If, in fact, it remains an exclusive club, I'm utterly opposed to giving a grant to an exclusive club," he said.

Ald. Joe Bourque said the real issue is that the provincial government's assessment authority should not classify the club the same way as a commercial hotel.

"I think that's the gut issue. We should take the assessment authority to task," Bourque said. "They're prepared to relent somewhat if we insist."

SAFETY RAIL AT PARKSIDE

A safety railing will be installed along the elevated section of the Trans-Canada Highway widening project where it runs past the Parkside Place townhouse complex between Burnside and Tillieum.

That commitment Monday from Highways Minister Alex Fraser appears to have removed one of the major concerns of Parkside Place residents, who had enlisted the aid of Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber in their dispute with the ministry.

Barber said Monday night that Fraser has also agreed to additional soundproofing of the area, and given an assurance that the steep embankment will be terraced.

But Barber said Fraser has made no commitment on the additional question of possible financial compensation for homeowners, who believe their property values have been diminished by the highway development's proximity.

The minister agreed to leave the door open on this vital issue, choosing to wait until the project was completed before considering possible financial compensation, "said the MLA.

Barber said he would recommend to the residents that they drop their plans to seek an injunction halting the work.

Ottawa Eyes B.C. Approach to Public Buildings

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The federal government appears interested in B.C.'s "new direction" in the management and construction of public buildings, Public Works Minister Alex Fraser said Monday.

The minister said he was asked to appear before the Senate finance committee recently to explain the province's reasons for setting up the B.C. Building Corp.

He said the federal government has a building and space problem and committee members wanted to find out why B.C. is the only province attempting to solve a similar problem with a new crown corporation.

Fraser was commenting in an interview on a Times story last week quoting several public works employees as saying morale is down because of uncertainty surrounding the setting up of BCBC.

A union-management committee is holding meetings to work out options for about 800 employees whose jobs will be scrapped and decide, primarily on the basis of seniority, which employees will be offered the 1,000 jobs available in BCBC.

About 300 safety inspectors will remain with the public works ministry.

Fraser said he appreciates the human problems involved in the changeover but added the joint committee is working to ensure that no one is out of work as a result of the move and that those best qualified get the BCBC jobs.

He said he hopes the corporation can be fully operational by April 1, 1978.

As to the employees' complaints that they have not been kept informed, Fraser said he announced the implications of setting up the corporation last April, just as soon as he had the information.

Fraser justified the creation of BCBC by saying it will provide more accountability by the various ministries as well as cut some of the fat that accumulated following an accelerated building program by the former NDP administration.

He reiterated that the various ministries now have to pay a month in advance for the offices they occupy. Previously, the cost of office space came out of the public works' department budget.

"Quite frankly, I think this is going to bring a lot of accountability," he said.

The minister said public works staff totalled 1,300 in January, 1972, and jumped to 2,200 by 1976 as a result of the building program initiated by the NDP.

He agreed that many of the buildings were needed "but no one can expect a government to keep that up for 10 years."

Fraser said consultants worked for eight months on an overall solution to the problem and came up with a Crown corporation which has the authority to borrow $200 million.

He said BCBC will likely sell bonds just like B.C. Hydro and then buy buildings on the same basis as a private individual purchases a home.

The corporation will use private companies to do some of the work he added.

He said that's the philosophical difference between the Social Credit government and the NDP.

"We want to use more of the private sector. Those guys are good though the private sector didn't exist."

Fraser said one of BCBC's first projects will be to come up with $100 million by 1979 when the government's downtown Vancouver complex, known as Robson Square, will be completed.</p

Evert Outclasses Foe; Tanner Upset by Lloyd

WIMBLEDON (UPI) — Chris Evert began her defense of the women's singles title at Wimbledon today with a methodical, 6-0, 6-3, demolition of American Rita Gerulaitis.

There was never any question about the outcome before another chilled, shivering crowd on the second day of the centenary all-England lawn tennis championships.

Playing unexciting, baseline tennis, the defending champion showed more accuracy, more consistency and more power than her outclassed opponent, who is ranked 19th in the United States.

Other women from the U.S. marched remorselessly through their opening rounds on the second day of the championship, where a record $373,440 in prize money — and much more in prestige — was at stake.

Rosemary Casals, Martina Navratilova and Julie Anthony were other easy, two-set winners.

Navratilova, the player seeded to meet Evert in the final, sliced through Britain's Coles, 6-3, 6-0.

Sixth-seeded Casals took only 50 minutes to polish off South African Tanya Harford, 6-1.

The 28-year-old American from Sausalito, four times Wimbledon semi-finalist, had too many weapons for her 18-year-old opponent.

Unseeded Julie Anthony of Santa Monica, Calif., overpowered Japan's Nana Sato, a Federation Cup competitor, 6-1, 6-3, in less than an hour.

On Monday fourth-seeded American Roscoe Tanner, one of the world's most feared grass court players, bowed to the precocious skills of 22-year-old Briton John Lloyd when the 100th Wimbledon tennis championships opened in bitterly cold weather.

Tanner blasted his way through the first set but then his big first serve failed him and Lloyd, beaten in the first round at the last three Wimbledons, won 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Former champions Stan Smith of the United States and Australia's Rod Laver both made winning starts, Smith beating a potentially dangerous Australian, Dick Crealy, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2, and the 38-year-old Laver sweeping aside Ireland's Sean Sorenson 6-0, 6-2, 6-2.

Fifth-seeded American Brian Gottfried beat Bolivia's Ramiro Benavides 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 and Romania's Ilie Nastase, the third seed, eliminated the left-hander of the American tennis twins, Tom Gullikson, 6-2, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3.

SPECIAL MEDAL DENIED CONNORS

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — The All-England Tennis Club accused Jimmy Connors of courtesy Monday and decided against giving him a commemorative medal to mark the Wimbledon Centenary.

While 44 former Wimbledon champions paraded on the centre court to receive medals, Connors went off to an outer court.

A club official said Connors had no apology or explanation for missing the parade, and also ignored an invitation to come but indicated in advance that they could not get here, not to those who were here, but had the courtesy not to collect it.

Connors, the champion in 1974, is nursing a cracked bone in his right thumb. He suffered the injury during practice a week ago, and was granted a 24-hour delay before playing his first-round match so he could get an orthopedic splint fitted.

Later the committee had met and felt Connors' behavior was "extreme courtesy."

Mills announced in a statement: "The committee has decided that medals will be sent only to former champions who made every effort to come but indicated in advance that they could not get here, not to those who were here, but had the courtesy not to collect it."

This is Victoria's world of snooker and the No. 2 man in the world is returning to where it all began some 14 years ago. Then the moment. Slim, saute and debonair, Thorburn enters the building. The crowd claps.

Thorburn is a Victoria native who this year lost in the final of the world snooker championship to John Spencer of England, 25 matches to 21.

For that display he received $5,500, but more, it assured him of a financially-secure future in the game.

"I'm booked right through for exhibitions, displays and tournaments until next April," he said.

In that regard, Thorburn will appear at the University worth Vines (1332), Don Budge (1927-38), Bobby Riggs (1939), Jack Kramer (1947), Bob Falkenburg (1948), Budge Patty (1950) and Tony Trabert (1955), on through Arthur Ashe, the 1976 champion sidelined this year with an eye injury.

The hometown audience gave a special cheer to Fred Perry, Wimbledon champion from 1934 through 1936 and the last British singles champion.

Several of the 32 surviving titleholders were unable to attend. One of those was Helen Wills Moody, who sent word that she had wanted to come but had been in an auto accident and was unable to attend. But Alice Marble (1939) was there and so were Louise Brough, a quadruple winner, and Margaret Dupont (1947).

The indomitable Mrs. Ryan hobbled onto the court on crutches and, disdaining help, balanced herself on one crutch and — as representative of all the double winners with Brugnon — waved to the crowd, a champion to the end.

But their regrets were soon forgotten as the crowd of 15,000 shivering spectators cheered and applauded each time another immortal came forward to take his bow.

There were the French Four Musketeers who dominated tennis in the 1930s — Jean Borotra, Henri Cochet, René Lacoste and Jacques Brugnon — the numerous American champions — Ellsworth Vines (1332), Don Budge (1927-38), Bobby Riggs (1939), Jack Kramer (1947), Bob Falkenburg (1948), Budge Patty (1950) and Tony Trabert (1955), on through Arthur Ashe, the 1976 champion sidelined this year with an eye injury.

The indomitable Mrs. Ryan hobbled onto the court on crutches and, disdaining help, balanced herself on one crutch and — as representative of all the double winners with Brugnon — waved to the crowd, a champion to the end.

But their regrets were soon forgotten as the crowd of 15,000 shivering spectators cheered and applauded each time another immortal came forward to take his bow.

There were the French Four Musketeers who dominated tennis in the 1930s — Jean Borotra, Henri Cochet, René Lacoste and Jacques Brugnon — the numerous American champions — Ellsworth Vines (1332), Don Budge (1927-38), Bobby Riggs (1939), Jack Kramer (1947), Bob Falkenburg (1948), B

ISLAND'S BIG TRACK SHOW AGAIN DRAWS HUGE ENTRY

Track and field's big show comes up next weekend.

The annual Y-Times meet, one of the largest staged annually in the Pacific Northwest, is scheduled Saturday and Sunday at Centennial Stadium.

Almost 1,630 athletes including entrants from Alberta, Washington, Oregon and throughout British Columbia, are expected for the two-day age-class meet.

With competitions for all age classes, ranging from tyke to open divisions the meet enjoys great popularity. So much so, in fact, that one of the few restrictions imposed by meet officials concerns entries in "B" events.

Otherwise, explains meet organizer Eric Domke, "it would be impossible for us to handle the number of athletes who would like to compete."

In addition to being one of the biggest and most popular meets, it's one of the best bargains. It's a free show. There is no admission charge.

The meet is sanctioned by the B.C. Track and Field Association. As such, there will be extra interest in the performances in open events.

Results from the meet will be one of the determining factors in the selection of the provincial team for the 1977 Canada Summer Games.

Consideration Needed For Island Cup Matches

It's the way things are being done these days. Time, money and effort are donated by friends of the game but those who stand to benefit most just don't appreciate the service.

The Island Cup matches originated with Al Zimmerman when the former U.S. professional spent a few of his retirement years in the Sidney area. His idea, simply, meant to generate more prestige and greater participation in all Vancouver Island tournaments.

It has worked. By awarding points for performances in various tournaments, a committee has been able to declare a team of the Island's top 10 amateurs to line up for competition against the 10 leading professionals.

Francis Winspear, another friend of Island golfers, has sponsored the series for the past three years, and will do so again. Zimmerman has relocated in the San Diego area but Hal and Peggy Jacobsen of Glen Meadows have accepted the time-consuming task of compiling the points and arranging the windup matches in the fall.

It's been working, I say, because Victoria-area golfers have been displaying great interest in Up-Island tournaments while a handful of players from the north have started to show up in Lower Island events.

Unfortunately, the same enthusiasm hasn't hit the management level.

A case in point is the North Island Open at Comox. It's one of the tournaments designated as a point-awarded. The dates are July 9-10 but the entry limit was reached some time ago.

As a matter of fact, the field was full before posters and entry forms were mailed to the Victoria area.

The North Island test does not offer pro money. Still, some pros and their assistants were ready to play for amateur prizes "and the points."

While some district golfers are upset, it isn't a great problem... mainly one of communication.

It's a problem that could be solved if the Victoria District Golf Committee filed its approval of the Island Cup matches. Most members of the committee like the idea behind the matches but, as a group, have yet to supply official blessing.

They should, perhaps, in association with the Island professionals.

SHORT CHIPS: Speaking strictly as athlete-to-athlete, I'd have to say there's plenty of hope for Bill Bennett... The Premier has plenty of raw power and needs only to brush up on the finesse game around the greens to develop into a good golfer... he came back from a front-nine 38 to cut off 12 strokes on the back side and finish with a 104 in the Gofermana sponsored by the Chinese Social Credit Committee at Colwood Friday... Southpaw Jack Irving, with a best-ever round at Colwood, won top honors with 76-14-62...

I like the B.C. Amateur Golf Association's decision to bring out the stop-watches for this week's provincial tournament at Kamloops... Players will be given a time limit of four hours and 15 minutes to complete 18 holes... Contests in any group that exceeds the limit will be penalized two strokes each... Vancouver Island will be well represented... A total of 36 Island players are entered, including 23 from Victoria...

Al Speight, checking in with a net 126 for two rounds, won the Winspear Cup competition at Glen Meadows... Phil Scott, a former member of Saskatchewan's junior team, took low-gross honors with 75-70-145... George McPherson scored a hole-in-one on Gorge Vale's 14th hole recently while the 13th was the hot spot at Cedar Hill... Greg Barnes, Don McNab and Jack Hawkes all connected for aces on the 15th... It was career ace No. 8 for Barnes...

Bill Thompson, a former winner, was scheduled to be one of several Victorians heading for this week's P.N.G.A. seniors tournament at Wenatchee, Ore... Thompson wrenched his back Friday but it responded to treatment and he's ready to give it a go... While he took the long route, Alex McCabe was one of the few golfers to hit the seventh green in Sunday's wind-swept Centennial Fodosomes at Oak Bay... McCabe's shot headed for trouble on the beach but hit a rock and bounded back on the green... McCabe and partner got their par.

Pro-Am Included

Al Robertson of Glen Meadows holds a one-stroke lead over Nanaimo's Gary Scrammard as the assistant golf professionals head for their third and final round of their 1977 Vancouver Island championship.

JESSIE, FLORA EARN THIRD SHOT AT TITLE

Flora Martin and Jessie Kinnear are back for a third attempt at the British Columbia women's lawn bowling championshiп after winning the zone title during the weekend at Beacon Hill Park.

The Burnside duo was unbeaten in winning the zone and joined Ethel McFarlane and Jean Fullard of Lake Hill as the Vancouver Island representatives at the provincial tournament in New Westminster next weekend.

Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Kinnear qualified for the B.C. tourney in 1974 and 1975, but each time missed earning a berth in the Canadian play-off.

Victoria Drivers Top Sports Car Classes

Four Victoria drivers placed first in class in events at the sixth International Conference of Sports Car Club Races at Westwood, Port Coquitlam, on the weekend.

In the novice racing, Jim Bridger, in a Datsun 510, was first in class, B improved sedan, and ninth over-all; John Erith, in a Mini-Cooper.

In the senior competition Sunday, John Kendrew, in a Mini-Cooper-S, was first in class, F-sports racing, and third over-all; Bill Okell, in an MGB, was second in class E-production sports car, and 10th over-all; Michael Haworth, in a Datsun 510, was third in class, B sedan; Gordie Munroe, in a Brabham BT-21, was second in class, Formula Atlantic, and second over-all, and Larry Sandham, in a Mini-Cooper-S, was first in class, C improved sedan, and second over-all.

Greaves Make Their Move

Greaves Movers are living up to the second part of their name.

Greaves won their fourth straight game Monday night and moved into sole possession of second place in the Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League with a 3-0 shutout over Kubicki A's at Lambeth Park.

Roy Moretti picked up the pitching victory by striking out five batters, giving up only two bases on balls and allowing only two singles and a double.

Craneman's Death Accident—Jury

VANCOUVER (CP) — A coroner's jury here ruled Monday that the death of a man killed when he fell 200 feet to the ground from a collapsed construction crane, was accidental.

Thomas (Tony) Rudinsky, 40, of Port Coquitlam died of injuries April 1 after the crane collapsed at a construction site in the False Creek area of the city.

The five-man jury deliberated for one hour after hearing three days of sometimes complex technical testimony about the erection of cranes, weights and counterweights, dynamic motions and stress factors.

The jury in its verdict said that the supervisory capacity of Jasco Equipment Supply Ltd., Rudinsky's employer, lacked qualified personnel in the erection of the Kroll crane.

130 Rally To Land Emergency

They also said there was a lack of communication in direction of field personnel on the part of both management and engineering staff.

George Jackson, president of Jasco, testified Monday that Rudinsky telephoned him the morning of the accident to say that one of two heavy steel cables on pennant lines that supported the main jib or boom was misaligned and asked for a mobile crane to correct it.

Under questioning from provincial coroner Glen McDonald, Jackson said he felt and still feels the procedure suggested by Rudinsky was not dangerous.

The jury recommended that out-of-province cranes should be certified by professional engineers in B.C., that foremen in charge of erection and dismantling cranes be competent in safety and rigging.

DUNCAN — About 130 people turned out here Monday night for what had been billed as an "emergency public meeting" over threatened removal of 70 acres from the Agricultural Land Reserve.

Timbercrest, a development company, wants to subdivide the land near Somesos Lake which has an agricultural land classification.

The proposal is supported by North Cowichan council and the Cowichan Valley Regional District but an application to remove the land from the ALR has been rejected by the B.C. Land Commission.

Youth regional director Ken Douglas, one of those opposing removal, said the provincial cabinet is expected to rule on an appeal within the next two weeks.

Monday's meeting decided to send a delegation to try and meet Premier Bennett.

Saanich Seeks Support For Student Pay Plan

Saanich is going to try to enlist the help of the provincial government and other B.C. municipalities in its fight to provide summer jobs for students at less than union rates.

Ald. Ian Cass, chairman of the ad hoc committee charged with providing summer jobs for students this summer, persuaded council on Monday that the matter be aired at the meeting of the Union of B.C. Municipalities, to be held at Vernon in September.

Saanich will recommend to the UBCM that the matter of students being paid non-union rates for summer work be negotiated between the provincial government's labor department and the provincial executive of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Cass said, in negotiations with the Saanich local, his committee had been told any change of policy should come from the provincial level.

Saanich will also recommend that pay scales be worked out that are more in line with job categories and provincial funding. Cass stressed remuneration should be scaled, ranging for those who are "completely unskilled" and those "with many years of skills and work experience."

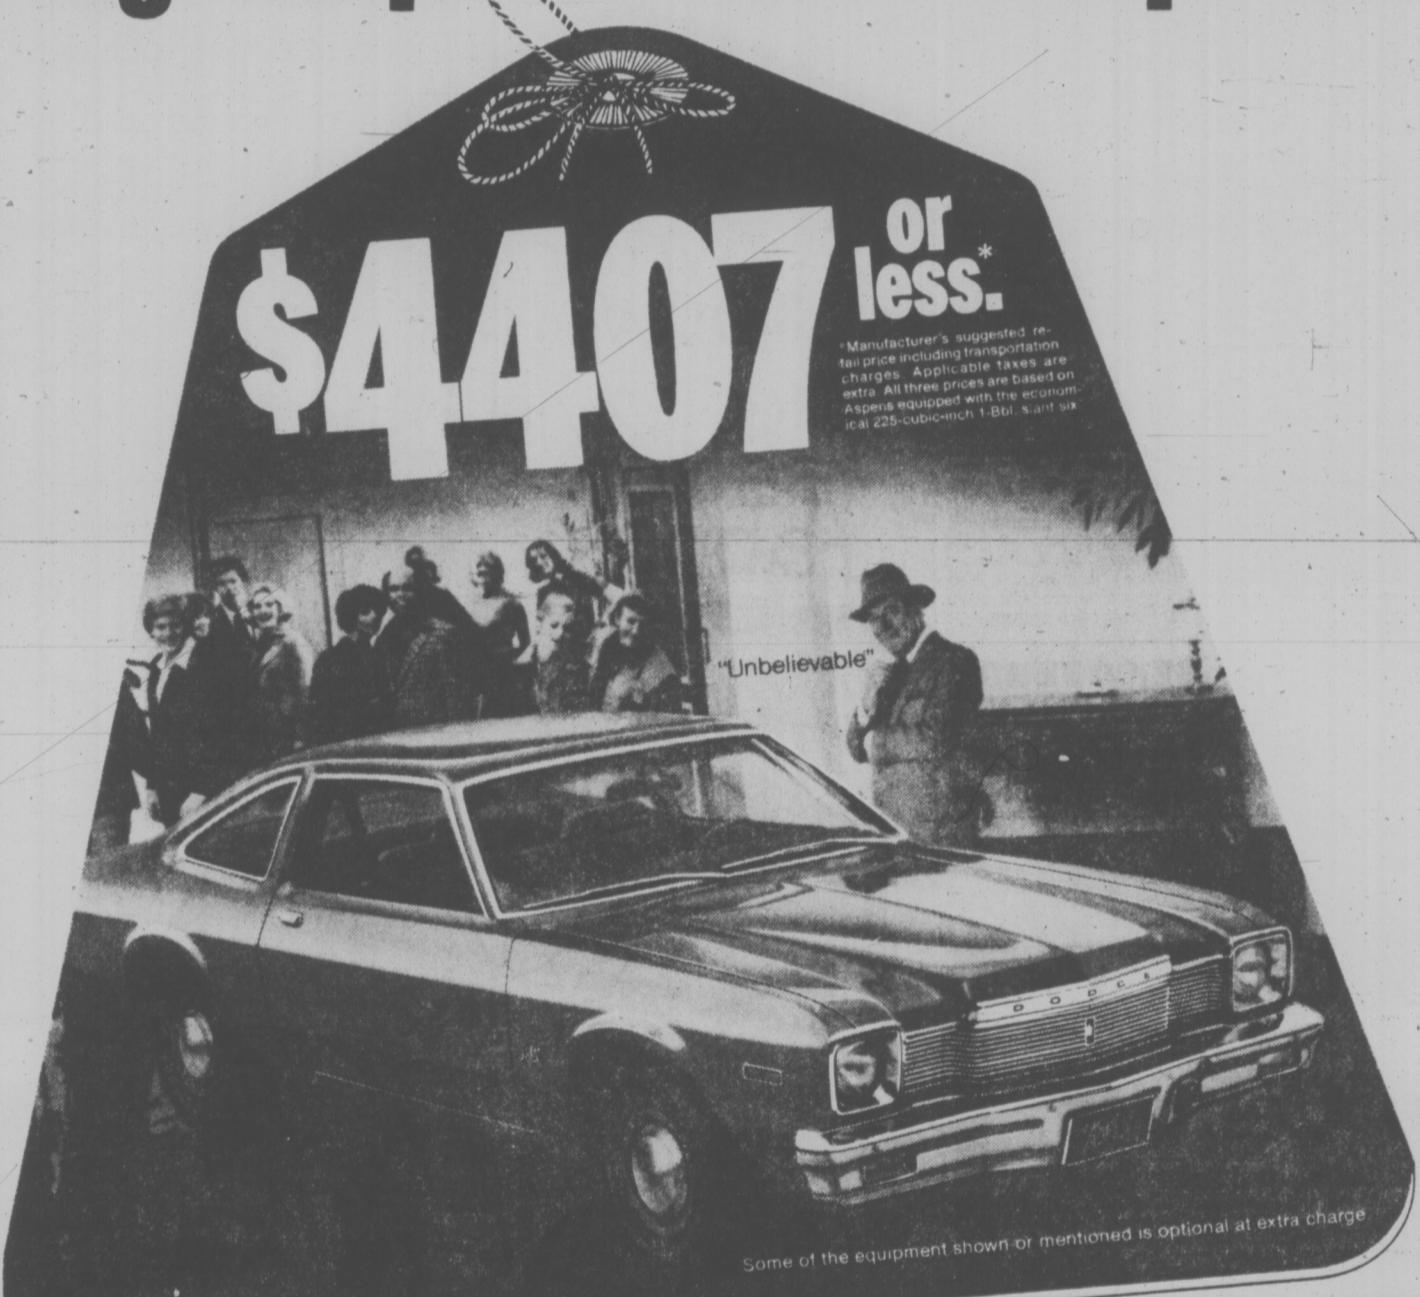

In another resolution, Saanich will ask support from the UBCM in a bid to get the provincial government to have the National Building Code changed. The amendment, recommended by fire chief Harold Gains, would require all new apartment and condominium construction to have smoke detector devices installed.

CBC Chief Denies $2B Budget Requirements

EDMONTON (CP) — An Ontario commission which forecasts that the CBC annual budget will reach $2 billion within 10 years has shocked the public network, according to CBC president Al Johnson.

"I've never heard of any such figure," Johnson said.

He said the Ontario commission—which urged a restructuring of television—has overestimated CBC's future spending.

Headed by Judy LaMarsh, former federal secretary of state, the commission released a 497-page report critical of Canadian broadcasters.

Stuart Griffiths, a communications consultant who prepared financial data for the commission, "certainly didn't come to us when he was making his estimate," Johnson said.

The CBC currently spends about $450 million a year and should be able to meet its "substantial" needs with a government-endorsed annual funding increase of five per cent, he said.

This increase in funding would include such proposed additions as a second CBC channel and expanded Canadian programming.

Johnson said the commission went beyond its mandate to investigate violence in the media.

"I know she (Judy LaMarsh) has very broad interests. But I didn't predict this."

He said he does not support a commission recommendation that television networks be replaced by a single public agency called Television Canada, but there should be an all-encompassing inquiry into the industry.

"It's high time we had a stock-taking. We've been in a kind of cultural drift . . . he said. "Mostly we have allowed ourselves to drift into the Americanization of the Canadian TV system."

He said he "flatly" opposes pay-TV. Claims that it would provide a regular schedule of Canadian films were not valid.

'McCarthy-Like' Press Attack Hit by Davey

QUEBECERS GOT $100,000 — LE DEVOIR

MONTREAL (CP) — Le Devoir says five senior employees of the Quebec Construction Agency (QCA), four of whom were named during the Cliche commission inquiry into corruption and violence in Quebec's construction industry, misappropriated funds of more than $100,000.

The newspaper says the funds were misappropriated beginning last December. The Cliche commission hearings were held in 1974 and 1975.

The paper reports that one man who did not repay money he had taken is still in a position to deal with millions of dollars generated by the QCA's social funds.

Doyle Hits At Crosbie

OTTAWA (CP) — John C. Doyle, former chairman of Canadian Javelin Ltd., accused Newfoundland MP John Crosbie Monday of abusing his parliamentary protection to make "malicious, misleading and inaccurate" statements about him.

In a written statement, Doyle said some of Crosbie's Commons' statements constitute an attack on personal liberty in Canada and are intended to favor a minority shareholders' group seeking control of Canadian Javelin Ltd., a Montreal-based resource company.

Trading of Javelin shares has been suspended in both Canada and the United States because of irregularities. Doyle, wanted in both countries on a variety of charges, is living in Panama, where he cannot be extradited.

Crosbie (PC — St. John's West) has accused the government of dragging its feet in prosecutions against Doyle for tax evasions dating back as far as 1950. He also says Doyle is siphoning off Javelin funds through a subsidiary in the Bahamas, contrary to a court order.

The Doyle statement said the revenue department has secured everything Doyle owes it, contrary to what Crosbie alleged.

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Keith Davey told the Senate Monday night that his brief flutter in the horse-racing business "not only failed but lost money."

The senator, who is campaign manager for the federal Liberal party, was replying to what he termed "a McCarthy-like attack" on him in the Toronto Sun.

He also objected to a Toronto Star headline about his involvement in Hydroculture Luwassa, a privately-owned Canadian company which grows plants without soil.

The story in the Star quoted Elmer MacKay (PC-Central Nova) saying there was "enough greenery and foliage around some of these government offices to see a cheetah peeking through some of these government buildings."

The Star story carried a head saying "Davey using position to make money: MP."

"When these newspapers do it to you, they really do it up brown," Davey said Monday.

He said he had checked into the company and found it did only $1,000 worth of business with the federal government. It was such an infinitesimally small fraction of the company's business as to make Mr. MacKay's remarks ludicrous.

Davey said the Sun's story about his ownership in Bluewater Raceway Associates Ltd., lasted only the summer of 1975.

At one point he owned 50 per cent of the shares the Ontario Racing Commission, the provincial licensing authority.

But this was soon reduced to 35 per cent and he said no profits were made.

York Sports, the company incorporated to hold the Davey shares, now is dormant, he said.

Davey also said that at no time was there any question "between me and my partners or me and the Ontario Racing Commission, that said, indicated or suggested that I would be responsible for licences."

Now was that his function, he added.

Davey said the Sun article about him "was inaccurate, misleading, unfair and full of innuendo."

The Silver Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth II 1952 to 1977

To celebrate the Silver Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth II, we have made special arrangements with the British Post Office and The Royal Mint to have the two official issues for sale for these 4 days only! This will be an ideal opportunity for the collector and those wanting a valuable memento of the Silver Jubilee year to purchase these two beautiful sets.

Queen Elizabeth Silver Jubilee Crown 1952-1977

Issued in Great Britain and now in Canada at Woodward's. Ascending to the throne in February, 1952, Queen Elizabeth II is now celebrating her 25th year of reign. To commemorate this Silver Jubilee, the Royal Mint has issued a Silver Jubilee Crown, 25 new pence. Struck in cupro-nickel, this coin is in brilliant uncirculated condition and comes in the Sandhill case, exclusive to Woodward's in Western Canada. The obverse bears the effigy of the Queen on horseback (similar to the 1953 Commemorative Coronation Crown); and on the reverse, the Ampulla and Anointing Spoon from the Royal Regalia encircled by a floral border and surmounted by a Royal Crown.

295 Each 10 for 2799

Queen Elizabeth Silver Jubilee Stamps 1952-1977

The British Post Office is also commemorating the Silver Jubilee of the ascension to the throne with an official issue. These Silver Jubilee stamps are only the second such issue by the British Post Office. These stamps centre around a new portrait of the Queen, and consist of 4 values, 8½¢, 10¢, 11¢ and 13¢. The stamps are housed in the official presentation pack of the British Post Office, which gives a short history of the coronation, along with a review of important event world-wide in the last 25 years. Price per official presentation pack of 4 Jubilee stamps.

275 Pack 10 sets of 4 2549
Buy One of each and SAVE: 529
One Silver Jubilee Crown in the Sandhill Case and one set of 4 Silver Jubilee stamps in the presentation pack.

The Churchill Crown A Collector's Item

To commemorate the death of Sir Winston Churchill in 1965. The Royal Mint issued a 5 shilling or crown piece. We have been fortunate to purchase a large lot of these crowns, in uncirculated condition, and offer them while our quantities last. The obverse bears the uncrowned effigy of Queen Elizabeth II, the reverse, a portrait of Sir Winston Churchill — the first and only time the head of a commoner has appeared on an English coin. Each coin comes in a protective vinyl envelope.

150 Each 10 for 1428

Careful Check Cuts Home Maintenance

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Making an annual check of the home can save Canadians thousands of dollars in extensive repair bills, says Gordon Pastorius, Windsor's chief building inspector.

He said it's time to take a good, hard look at all those mystery areas that often seem to fall apart without warning.

Older homes are vulnerable to deteriorating foundations, he said.

"If there are cracks and the homeowner doesn't know just how serious the situation is, he should find someone in the building business who does."

Pastorius said a homeowner shouldn't panic if he finds a few structural faults, but it's always good to have them pointed out."

In many cities, building inspection departments will "look" at a home anytime a problem is suspected.

An area to check is the roof, he said. Look to see if the wind has lifted shingles and the boards underneath.

Also check for any signs of rust that may develop for they can be potential hazards to the structure.

"It's also important to look at the chimney. You'll want to look for mortar deterioration and at the chimney flashing. Make immediate repairs if there is any sign of trouble."

Pastorius said the next venture is the attic to look for any water damage. If the attic is warm, it probably means that heat from the house is escaping through the ceiling, he said.

"And that means a useless, expensive waste of energy." He said attics should be insulated and vents included to allow the inevitable warm air buildup to pass through the cold-spot and outside. He recommends using roof and soffit vents.

"But if it isn't maintained, you'll get water washing on the walls. That in turn works on the mortar and causes deterioration."

He said that all downspouts should be connected directly to the sewer.

Porches, front and back, often are neglected at check-up time.

"Look for cracks in the concrete. If there are any, buy one of the commercial repair kits."

It is even more important to repair wooden porches because rain and snow will speed up wood rot, he said.

"Each year we lose more wood steps from lack of paint than anything else. Moisture gets in because there isn't any barrier. A simple coat of paint would solve the problem and the expense."

"Mr. Schnook? I'm sorry our vice president can't speak with you either. He is semi-permanently in conference at Linda Vista Hospital. Yes, I suppose you could call him there. Just ask for Napoleon."

George considered this for a bit.

"I still think the world would be a better place to live in if people were honest. Bosses would have to take responsibility for their actions knowing their secretaries wouldn't run interference for them. People would begin to trust each other again knowing they were getting the straight scoop, and become more accepting of each other's foibles. Why, paranoia could be virtually eradicated from this land, like smallpox and anti-war protesters."

At that moment the phone rang.

"It's for you, George," I said. "It's Mr. Fawning from Saynara Life Insurance."

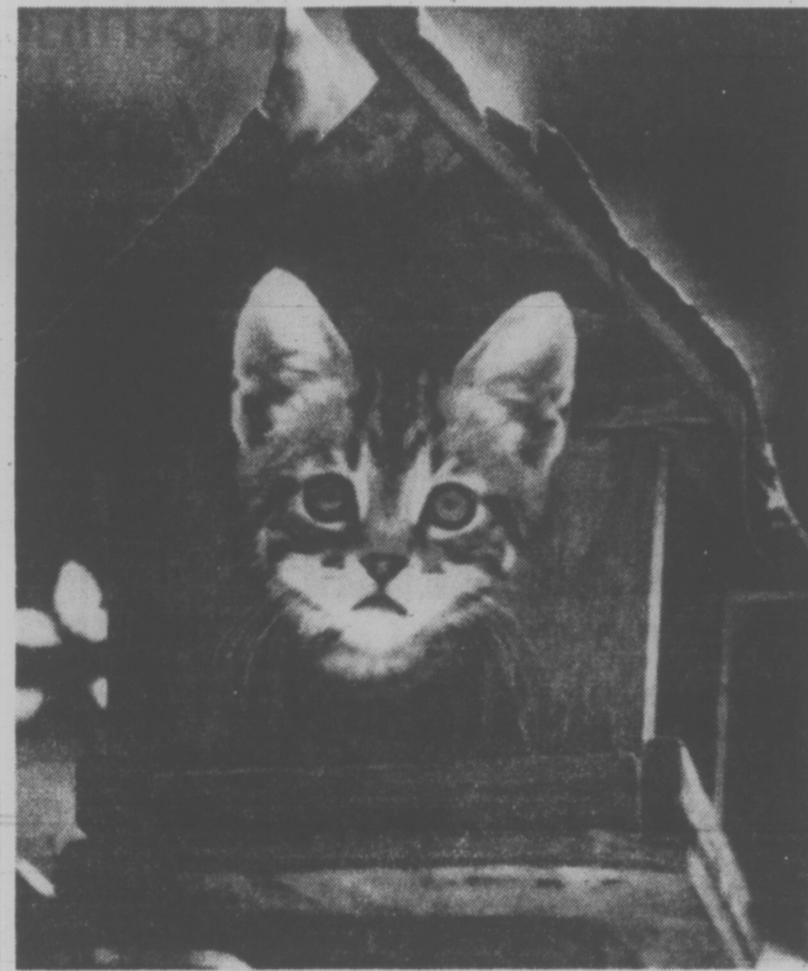

"Tell him I just stepped out of the office," said George nimble stepping out of the office. He's a very honest man, George.

"Mr. Fawning," I said. "George says to tell you he just stepped out of the office."

George stuck his head back in the room.

"You're fired," he smiled.

Teens Under-Nourished

EDMONTON (CP) — Nutrition should become a compulsory subject in school because a federal study has shown that teenagers are among the most under-nourished people in Canada, says Lillian Gregory, head of the health committee of the National Council of Women.

Under-nutrition is not just confined to children of low-income families but may also be found among the teenaged children of the rich, "judging by the teenagers eating patterns."

Mrs. Gregory said the council also believes better nutrition programs are needed for pregnant women, nursing mothers, infants, elderly people, native people, and those of low and fixed incomes.

Let's inspect the effect of recent publicity on the need for mammography (breast X-ray) of all women of all ages. The unfortunate coincidence that breast cancer was found in the wives of several high officials in Washington undoubtedly did explode a wave of fear and anxiety.

Breast clinics were overrun by women pleading to be X-rayed immediately. The furor has died down somewhat, but the fear lingers.

At the Scripps Clinic in La Jolla, California, special guidelines have been laid out as to who should have mammography.

mographies. The overuse of this X-ray technique for diagnosis was thought to have some potential dangers.)

These are the guidelines:

1) Any woman, regardless of age, with signs or symptoms that show a breast tumor, cancerous or non-cancerous, should, of course, have a mammograph.

2) A woman who has a high risk for breast cancer (a strong family history, previous breast cancer, no pregnancy before 30 years of age) should receive periodic screening examinations, including mammography.

3) Periodic screening should be done for ALL women over the age of 50 years.

4) Women under 50 years without symptoms should not have periodic screening until further facts are discovered about the benefits and the risks of mammography.

Mammography is truly one of the greatest life-saving tools for the diagnosis of breast cancer. The medical profession and scientists are carefully inspecting every aspect of this technique, and balancing its values against any possible danger, no matter how slight.

As further evidence unfolds, it will be reported in these columns. In the meantime, your own doctor's judgment must be followed.

MOTHER readers Warner and Lucile Bowers of upstate New York have devised some real labor and space savers for use in their organic garden — vine towers.

The vine towers are 3-foot diameter cylinders of 5-foot tall chicken wire stapled to 6-foot high, 1x2 supports. The Bowers have eight of these contraptions on which they grow squashes, cucumbers, beans, tomatoes and other plants that tend to sprawl.

The vine towers contain the foliage within a small area and raise the crop to a good picking level.

How to 'Summerize' Your Hair

Ask Jennifer

By JENNIFER ANDERSON
Warm weather changes the condition of the hair and many heads develop behavior problems ranging from the crazy frizzies to the limp stringles! A good haircut, more conditioning, newsetting techniques and a little more patience can solve any problem.

Dear Jennifer, I dread the return of warm weather only because my hair turns into a layer of frizz. I spend all my time setting it in big rollers and sitting under my dryer, but an hour later it's doing its own thing again. Surely there is a solution for my problem. I'll get a crewcut before I'll spend all that time on my hair this summer. — Mary Jane C.

Although it's small comfort, this is a common summer hair problem. But there are a number of ways to fight back. Try one of these solutions:

The simplest solution of all — and a popular one this summer — is the classic knot at the nape of the neck. After washing your hair and applying a setting lotion, center or side part your hair and pull it back into a covered elastic band. Tuck the ends into a neat bun. Tuck a fresh or silk flower into the bun for an evening look.

Learn to wrap your hair around your head instead of using rollers. Put one roller in the top center (using it as the center of the "pinwheel" you will make with your hair); section your hair and comb it, section by section, around the head. Cover it with a scarf and let it dry as you continue your day's activities.

Another method is to stop fighting it. Take your head to a professional stylist and have it cut and shaped to curl wildly and look good no matter what the weather conditions are. (A crewcut is a bit drastic, but if you have the right face for it, a super-short cut is a good solution.)

Having the hair straightened with chemicals is the last solution. In the hands of a hair stylist (who is an expert in this department), the results can be truly exciting, but too often the hair looks dull, flat and stripped of natural beauty.

Dear Jennifer: I had my hair professionally straightened. I am pleased with the results but I was told I must condition it often, keep it out of the sun and generally spend a lot more time taking care of it. Is that true? — Sonya A., Montréal.

It's the truth. Having the hair straightened is just the same as applying hair coloring or permanent wave solution to the hair in that the hair is "chemically changed." Conditioning is a must and sun protection a necessity.

Dear Jennifer: My hair is cut in something that was called the "China Chop," long straight bands and blunt cut all around below chin level. Can you suggest a summer hairstyle for evenings? My hair is so thick and heavy that even hairpins won't hold it. — Myrna T.

Here's the hairstyle for you: Wrap small sections of the hair with thin gold cord. Start close to the scalp and continue to the ends of the hair. Knot but leave a length of loose end. Now bring the sections from both sides to meet at the back of the head and tie the loose ends into a bow.

Who's the One With a Dirty Mind?

DEAR ABBY: Why do male physicians always insist that their women patients disrobe completely when they come for an office visit? It seems that this procedure is especially "necessary" when the woman patient is young and attractive.

Princess Has Son

THE HAGUE (Reuters) — Princess Christina of The Netherlands, fourth and youngest daughter of Queen Juliana, has given birth of a son in hospital here. A government spokesman said the princess, 39, and son, 12th in line of succession to the Dutch throne, were in excellent condition. Princess Christina married American author Jorge Guillermo in 1975 and they live in New York city.

Since I am a man, I have my own ideas about why doctors insist on it. I have never heard of a man being asked to undress.

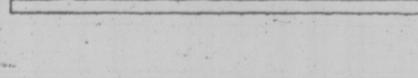

You find out, Abby, and let us husbands know. There are at least a quarter of a million other men in Michigan who would like the answer to this one. — CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: Both men and women must disrobe to some extent for a physical examination. Your suspicions are as groundless as they are evil-minded. And who appointed YOU spokesman?

$1M JOB OFFER FOR MARGARET

MONTREAL — A promotional company has offered Margaret Trudeau a three-year, $1 million contract for public appearances and photography work on behalf of an unnamed "major international organization."

Promotions Par Phyllis, which produced some of the concerts during last year's Olympic Games in Montreal, made the offer in a letter mailed Monday to the prime minister's residence in Ottawa.

wa. company spokesman Dan Kaufman said.

The offer also was made public "so that Margaret would hear about it wherever she is," he said.

Kaufman declined to name the Montreal-based organization which made the offer, but insisted it is "bona fide."

The letter says the job "will involve world travel on behalf of an international organization and will terminate with the 1980 Olympics."

NEW YORK — Margaret Trudeau is quoted in an American magazine as saying she yearns for the day her husband leaves the Canadian prime minister's office so she can "fall in love with him all over again."

An article in the July issue of Ladies' Home Journal says she has never had a romantic involvement with anyone but her husband and that Trudeau has never felt threatened by rumors of extra-marital affairs.

"We need some time and space apart in our marriage in order to breathe again and to learn how to give again," she is quoted as saying.

As to what will happen after

"I have been faithful to my husband," she is quoted as saying in the article entitled: "Margaret Trudeau's Own Story."

Following a spate of rumors that their marriage was on the rocks, the Trudeau's recently agreed to a three-month trial separation.

Mrs. Trudeau moved to New York City earlier this spring to pursue a career as a photographer following her headlined friendship with members of the Rolling Stones rock-music group and rumors of a romantic link with the group's leader, Mick Jagger.

"The scandal tabloids tried to make a romance out of me and the musicians," Mrs. Trudeau is quoted. "It was vile innuendo and suggestion—absolutely distasteful. Apparently women aren't even allowed to talk with a man without the level of being interpreted as sexual."

mantic involvement with anyone other than him, and he has never felt threatened by vicious rumors of alleged extra-marital affairs. I have been faithful to my husband."

Mrs. Trudeau is also reported to have denied she had moved to New York City because she was pregnant and wanted to have an abortion.

"If I had been pregnant, I would have had the baby. Pregnancy is such a wonderful thing."

BURNABY — Truck driver Nick Chutskoff says he has spent $15,000 printing 100,000 decals promoting Canadian unity, but he still predicts the separation of Quebec in 15 years.

Chutskoff, 29, says he has sent out thousands of letters urging the distribution of the patented decal featuring a Canadian flag split in two and the phrase "united we stand, divided we fall."

He put up his farm, car and truck as collateral to the project self-supporting.

Both big business and Communism promote separation as a divide and conquer theory, he claims.

LONDON — Schoolboy Anthony Woodbridge, 14, found guilty of robbing a shopkeeper, was ordered by a judge to be locked up for seven years. Anthony, who has been before the courts on 11 previous occasions for robbery, carrying a firearm, taking cars and for committing more than 100 burglaries, was described as a hopeless case.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Hospital officials have no word yet on when former first lady Bess Truman may be going home. Mrs. Truman, 92, is in satisfactory condition at Research Medical Centre, where she is being treated for a fall last Thursday night at her home in Independence, Mo.

INSTANT MILLIONAIRE John Brown, a machinist from Ingersoll, Ont., who won $1 million in Sunday's Loto-Canada draw, perches atop a Cadillac at a Toronto dealership Monday after claiming his prize. Brown's first desire was "to buy the biggest Cadillac I can find." He also intends to buy one for the friend who sold him the ticket.

Three Cardinals Lead Neumann Canonization

VATICAN CITY — Led by three United States cardinals, thousands of pilgrims who came to Rome for the canonization of the first male U.S. saint began three days of papal services Monday in Roman basilicas where John Neumann, Neumann, the "little bishop" of Philadelphia, died 12 years ago.

The traditional Triduum (three-day) masses were to be celebrated by John Cardinal Carberry of St. Louis in the Basilica of St. Mary Major on Monday, John Cardinal Krol of Philadelphia in the Basilica of St. John Lateran today and Terence Cardinal Cooke of New York in St. Paul's Outside the Walls on Wednesday.

Neumann, called the "little bishop" in his diocese because he was just more than five feet tall, visited the basilicas when he came to Rome in 1854.

The services are acts of thanksgiving for the glorification of "a son of America," as Pope Paul described the new saint during the outdoor canonization mass before a predominantly U.S. crowd of 25,000 in St. Peter's Square.

It was the 79-year-old pontiff's eighth canonization in his 13 years as head of the Roman Catholic Church.

Born Geraldine Stoeck, Oct.

29, 1927, she took the name of her father's firm, Brooks Costume Co., as her stage name.

Miss Brooks began on Broadway when she was about 16 in Follow the Girls.

Her first film was playing an imitation of actress Katharine Hepburn as the film daughter of the late actress Joan Crawford in Possessed.

She also played in several television series.

She won a Tony nomination in 1952 for Brightwater and Emmy nominations for roles in episodes of The Defenders, Bonanza and for a television special based on the Broadway play Hilda Crane.

She appeared recently in a segment of Barefoot in the Park.

Survivors besides her husband include her sisters, Mrs. Blanca Strook and Gloria Stern.

Private funeral services were set for Wednesday.

In the Vanderbilt Cup Championships of 1977, which were held in Pasadena, Calif., this past spring, a deal arose which, if a title were required, might be captioned: "Desperate Men Make Desperate Moves." Sitting in the West seat was Sidney Lazard, of New Orleans.

The bidding:
South West North East
Pass 1 ♦ Dble. Pass
2 ♦ 5 ♦ 5 ♦ Pass
Pass Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♦.

Technically, South's jump to two spades in response to partner's takeout double was not justified (a minimum of 10 points is required). But South assumed that North, for his double, had good spade support; and, hence, South's six-card spade suit figured to win a lot of tricks.

After Lazard had opened the ace of diamonds, and the dummy came into view, he realized that his partner rated to have zero points; and it was clear to him that to defeat the contract, he had to ruff a club.

It was his intention, at trick two, to lead a low diamond and hope that his partner possessed the jack of diamonds and would win with that card. If East then played back a club, Lazard would ruff; for the setting trick.

But, on West's lead of the diamond ace, East discarded the diamond jack, evidently intending to initiate a high-low signal to denote possession of a doubleton. Undaunted (after all, the jack might have been a singleton), West now continued with the deuce of diamonds—and East was amazed when his seven-spot won the trick. But it didn't take East very long to realize that West must have had a good reason for underleading the K-Q-10-8 of his suit: the reason had to be that West was desirous of trumping something.

Looking at his own hand and dummy, which contained ten clubs between them, the suit West rated to be void was clubs. So, at trick three, East led a club, which West ruffed, for the setting trick. A gambling desperation lead by West had earned a nice dividend.

Astrological Forecast for

Wednesday, June 22

By SYDNEY OMAR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get affairs in order. Bring priorities into focus. Spotlight on practical matters, employment, services, health, co-workers, those who share special interests. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently and so does the number "8."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good Moon aspect coincides now with change, variety, stimulation of creative abilities, urges. Member of opposite sex is in scenario. You get rid of burden, gain more recognition, find ways to obtain better display, distribution. Aires, Virgo are very much in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get support from established sources. You can take plunge in direction of more independent action. Stress creativity; get to heart of matters. Become thoroughly familiar with territory, land, property. Yes, love does figure into scheme of events!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Movement, social activity, versatility, relatives, shopping, unusual mail—all are accentuated. Aquarius, Leo individuals figure prominently. Another Cancer may want you to "verify an order." Key now is to maintain balance, and to exhibit sense of humor, fitness.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on payments, collections, protection of valuables, elevating personal possessions. Study cancer message for valid hint. Gemini, Sagittarius persons help you to win major point. Expand horizons, but overcome tendency to be extravagant. Yes, social event could be exciting.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lunar cycle high—take initiative. Make new starts, emphasize personal appearance. Judgment, intuition are on target. Accent details, fine points—build on solid base. Begin your climb to more elevated position. Aquarius, Scorpio and Taurus play key roles.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Communications open—what was secret, restricted becomes available. Your ability to interpret, to solve puzzle is enhanced. One you "respond to" does share your feelings. Know it and cast aside fears, doubts.

LIBRA (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Communications open—what was secret, restricted becomes available. Your ability to interpret, to solve puzzle is enhanced. One you "respond to" does share your feelings. Know it and cast aside fears, doubts.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for

Wednesday, June 22

By SYDNEY OMAR

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on reputation, achievement, relations with superiors. One in authority wants to be reassured. You may be "let in on" secrets. Key is to keep confidence, to see people as they are, to express feelings without becoming maudlin.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Moon aspect is favorable, depicts chance to communicate, to expand horizons, to travel, to elucidate philosophy. Another Capricorn figures prominently. More authority, responsibility and advancement are indicated.

ARQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You gain more than originally anticipated. Money, partner, could be affected by unusual circumstances.

FINISH rather than initiate project. Deal with Aries, Libra persons. Concern with lost articles, hidden objects is evident. Yes, you'll succeed in ridding your self of burden.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lie low—deal with "legal entanglements." New approach brings best results. Love and marriage could be in picture. Accent on publicity, public relations, finding common meeting ground with those who oppose your views.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Movement, social activity, versatility, relatives, shopping, unusual mail—all are accentuated. Aquarius, Leo individuals figure prominently. Another Cancer may want you to "verify an order." Key now is to maintain balance, and to exhibit sense of humor, fitness.

Each distinct letter in this easy addition stands for a particular but different digit.

It's an eerie sound in the woods at night, and in fact this WOOD is truly odd—you know what that means! So what do you make of it?

1-IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you are advertising. If you are advertising an apartment room etc., say for rent, or property for sale,
start your ad with the location.

2-RE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete definite information.
Always include the price-in-your advertisement.

3-MAKE IT EASY for the reader to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your address and add "no
call" if you do not want to receive calls. If you prefer a different time for the prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your address and add "no
call" if you do not want to receive calls. If you prefer a different time for the prospect to reach you.

4-PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A single ad is best for cost and you can of course stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5-PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good ad.

6-GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

COURT WORKER PROBE URGED

NDP MLA Alex Macdonald Monday said an aborted Victoria court case was a terrible waste of time and money and urged an investigation into the education system for justice workers.

Macdonald, speaking during debate in the legislature on the spending estimates of Attorney-General Garde Gardom, said a case involving Stephen Robert Williams was a "terrible waste of time and taxpayers money."

He urged that Gardom "take immediate cognizance of these facts and try to educate all court workers in their duties."

A bench warrant was issued for the arrest of Williams on Monday after he failed to appear for his Assize trial on a charge of rape.

Court worker Wayne Paul said Williams had been reporting to him as required until early April, but had not reported since then.

Paul said no one had told him what should happen if a person on bail fails to report as required by court order, so he did not tell anyone that Williams was not reporting or enlist the support of police.

Who's Boss Of Hydro, Barrett Asks

NDP leader Dave Barrett called on Energy Minister Jack Davis Monday to force B.C. Hydro chairman Robert Bonner to either shut up or retract his statements about nuclear power.

Barrett said during debate on Davis's budgetary estimates that Bonner has publicly contradicted the minister's stated opposition to development of nuclear power by Hydro.

The NDP leader asked Davis to show who holds the real power with respect to the Crown corporation and "tell Bonner to shut up."

Davis said in the legislature on Friday that there would be no nuclear plants in B.C.

He said the government would continue the anti-nuclear policy of the previous two administrations for economic reasons. B.C. does not need nuclear power stations because it had other energy alternatives.

However, in an interview Friday, Bonner said that provincial government opposition to nuclear power doesn't mean plants won't be developed in the future.

Bonner said nuclear power will become a reality in "10 years or so" if alternative energy sources do not meet the province's needs.

The Hydro head also said the corporation had made studies of possibilities for nuclear stations in B.C.

In the legislature on Monday, the Social Credit government launched a double-pronged denial of the Bonner statements.

Davis said that as far as he knew, there had been no specific studies into nuclear power, and if such studies were taking place, he would order them terminated.

George Mussalem (SC - Dewdney), the government whip, said he had talked with Bonner since Friday and Bonner denied making the statements attributed to him.

Barrett called the Bonner statements irresponsible and chided Davis for having so little control over the Hydro chairman.

SECOND MYSTERY BODY IN DUNCAN

DUNCAN - RCMP here are faced with their second mystery of a body in a week.

An RCMP spokesman said Monday officers found a body of a female "in an advanced state of decomposition" in a bush area about four miles south of Duncan.

Identification was not possible, the spokesman said, and the body was sent to Vancouver for an autopsy report.

Four youths on a weekend hike reported the body to police.

Last Thursday, RCMP identified the body of a youth found floating face-down in the Cowichan River as that of James Forrest, 18, of Gibbons Road, Duncan.

Gardom Attacked For Quebec Plan

Attorney-General Garde Gardom faced tough criticism Monday when his estimates came before the House.

NDP leader Dave Barrett and Liberal leader Gordon Gibson and former attorney-general Alex Macdonald were critical of his remarks last month concerning equalization payments to Quebec.

The attorney-general suggested at a Social Credit meeting that a "save Quebec from separation" fund be set up in lieu of such payments.

He said that B.C. should place equalization payments to Quebec in an interest-earning account pending the outcome of a referendum on separation.

Gibson said the notion was an "incredibly stupid suggestion."

Garde's remarks were an assault on national unity and a slur on British Columbians, he said.

The province's top lawmaker was suggesting that the law be broken by withholding payments.

Gibson called on Gardom to apologize immediately for the suggestion. Macdonald had previously called for the same move, and Barrett also urged Gardom to apologize.

The attorney-general refused to rise in his defense or apologize. After the house adjourned, Gardom told reporters that he would make a statement in the legislature on the matter but declined to say what the statement's content would be.

TOWN OF SIDNEY NOTICE

Take NOTICE that pursuant to By-law No. 596 cited as "Water Utility Distribution System Improvements Loan Authorization Bylaw, 1977" the Council of the Town of Sidney intends to construct improvements to the water distribution system as shown and described in a report prepared by the municipal engineering staff.

AND THAT the said report may be viewed during regular business hours at the Town Hall;

AND THAT, to finance the construction of the said works, the Council proposes to borrow by the way of debentures a sum not exceeding Two Hundred Thousand Dollars ($200,000) repayable not later than twenty years from the date of issue of such debentures;

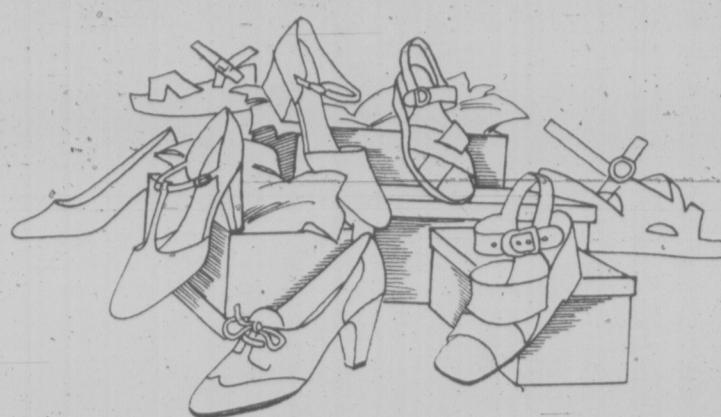

AND THAT unless within thirty days of the second and last publication of this Notice, not less than one-twentieth in number of the electors petition the Council for the submission of the said by-law for the assent of the electors, the Council may adopt such by-law;

AND THAT this is the second and last of two publications of this Notice.

Dated this 15th day of June, 1977.

G. S. LOGAN,
Town Clerk.

INDIANS TO SEIZE BRIDGE?

OTTAWA (CP) — Indians are threatening to seize the Interprovincial Bridge connecting Ottawa and Hull if Quebec continues to refuse to let them paint the Quebec side of the structure.

"We might take over the bridge," one of the Indian painters said Monday.

The Indians had considered a sit-in on the bridge Monday, but postponed it so they could study old laws and treaties relating to the rights of North American Indians.

"We don't want trouble, we are just here to paint," John Square, one of the Indian painters said.

The Indians were hired to paint the federally-owned bridge because of their skill in working at heights, but Quebec claims the Indian crew is not qualified to work as painters in that province.

The Indians are also unhappy because Quebec-qualified painters working on the Quebec side are earning about a dollar an hour more than they are. Painters are generally paid more in Quebec than in Ontario.

Ugandans Fleeing Massacre

NAIROBI (UPI) — Hundreds of Ugandans, including senior civil servants and army officers, have fled to Kenya to avoid a fresh "massacre" taking place inside the country in the wake of an assassination attempt against Idi Amin, the Kenya news agency said today.

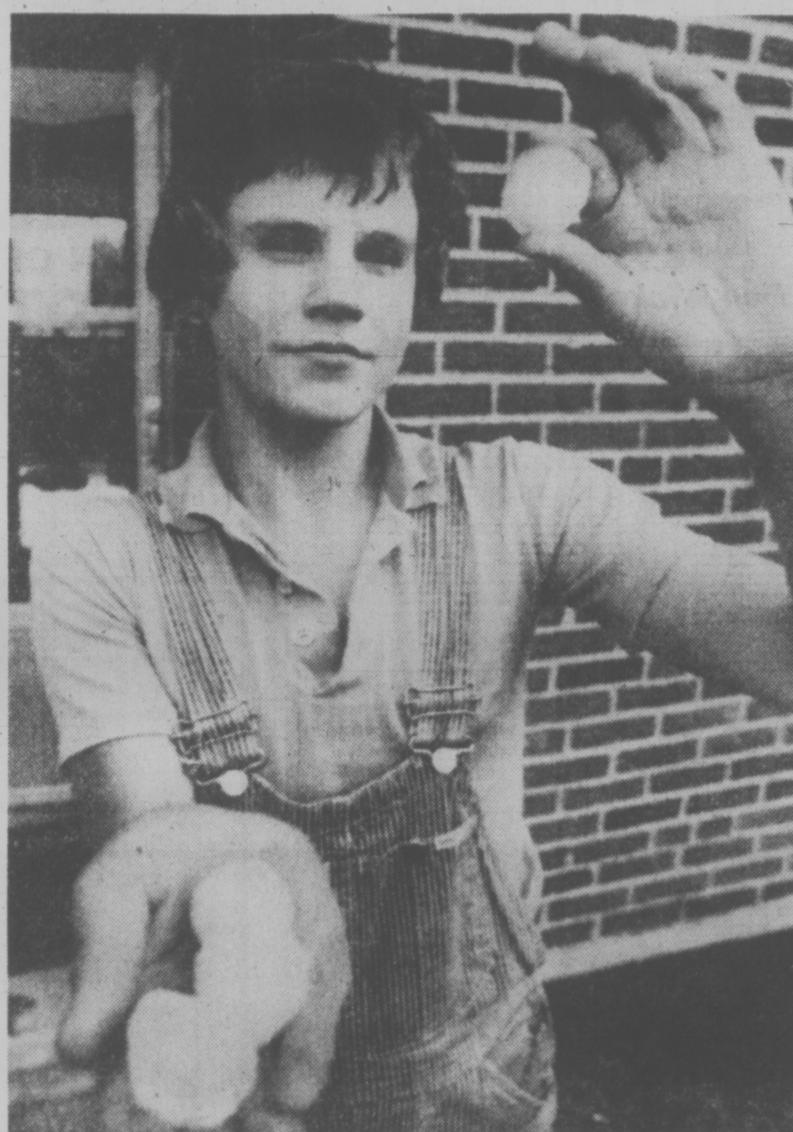

"Hundreds of Ugandans, including military and civilian personnel, have defected to Kenya, running away from certain death during the current purge in Uganda following an assassination attempt on President Idi Amin late last week," the government agency said.

It said Amin had been wounded during the ambush and quoted sources close to him as saying he had been hospitalized in Uganda.

Diplomatic sources in Kampala were quoted by the agency as saying there "certainly is a massacre taking place here."

Fleeing refugees were also quoted as saying the dreaded state research bureau had embarked on "a rampage of killings of innocent people and members of the armed forces suspected of having taken part in the assassination bid."

The Uganda cabinet met today as the mystery of Amin's whereabouts deepened. Entebbe statehouse officials said a dragnet to find him had been extended to foreign countries.

HAIL-STONES as big as golf balls fell Monday on the Toronto home of Dominic Farrell, 15, in a freak storm just one day in advance of the official beginning of summer.

A greatly-expanded Ombudsman Act covering local and provincial governments and all government agencies was introduced in the legislature Monday by Attorney General Garde Gardom.

The ombudsman, described by Gardom as the "conscience of the state" will have jurisdiction over all provincial government ministries, any corporation, commission, board, bureau or authority of which the government owns more than 50 per cent or where the majority of the board of directors is appointed by the government, municipalities, regional districts, the Islands Trust, public schools and colleges, universities, hospitals and the governing bodies of professional and occupational associations established by a provincial act.

Gardom said the ombudsman will decide the size of staff necessary to do the job.

Only B.C. and Prince Edward Island do not have an ombudsman and the size of other offices ranges from three in Newfoundland to 18 in Alberta, to 29 in Quebec to 110 in Ontario.

Gardom said he is looking forward to early passage of the bill and the appointment of a person of integrity, skill and a profound sense of fairness to hang out his shingle.

Gardom first introduced the act in the spring, 1976 legislative session. The first act gave the ombudsman jurisdiction only over provincial ministries and corporations.

The attorney-general said Monday the act was changed to include local governments because "we wanted to have the best act possible."

But he indicated the ombudsman when first appointed will cover only the provincial ministries and the jurisdiction will be expanded gradually.

The enlarged jurisdiction is the only major change contained in the new act.

Gardom said he hopes to see the $52,000 a year ombudsman position filled by the end of the year. The job has a six-year term.

The person will be chosen by an all-party legislative committee, a process which took several months when set up to choose an auditor general.

Gardom described the ombudsman as a "citizen's champion, independent of the system, independent of the administration, independent of the civil service and independent of politics."

The ombudsman has the power to investigate any complaint made by a citizen or organization against any of the agencies under the jurisdiction of the act.

After investigation, the ombudsman can make any rec-

Puns, earthiness, corny jokes and sheer vulgarity — they're all to be found in the names of B.C. companies.

Among those registered with the B.C. Registrar of Companies, a prize winner in the vulgar category would surely be Little Brick Shirt House Ltd., with Kats-Sas Hauling and Godawful Logging Ltd. running a close second.

And let's not overlook Buns in the Oven Bakery Ltd. and Fanny Pincher Holding Ltd.

For planning preposterous punning it would be hard to beat Arrow Dynamics Inc., while Bam Bam Explosives Ltd. would probably appeal to lovers of onomatopoeia.

What prudent investor would want to sink his money in a firm titled Swindell and Stole Enterprise Ltd.?

And somehow the name Fudpucker International Airlines Inc. doesn't inspire confidence, "international" or not.

Then there's the intriguing Waki Waki Telephone Service Ltd., Butt-Ox Holdings Ltd. and Super Studs Ltd.

Tum Tum Development Ltd. conjures up visions of a firm dedicated to encouraging gluttony.

And perhaps the most esoteric of them all is the splendidly titled Independent Designers of Eminently Applicable Sur-

By George, that's a prize worth having. The George in question is 27-year-old Peter George, a Victoria clothing store employee, who has won $20,000 in the latest Western Canada lottery draw.

There are no firm plans on what to do with the money, but his wife says the first priority is a holiday. "We're quite excited," she added.

The couple have a young son.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett got a little worried by one of the threats made against him by a Social Credit MLA in the legislature this week.

During one of Barrett's speeches, Socred Ray Loewen (Burnaby-Exmonds) started heckling the former premier, calling him the "late premier."

Barrett immediately complained to the committee chairman that Loewen's comments, in view of his occupation as an undertaker, constituted a threat.

"He's running around after me with a tape measure," Barrett complained.

With summer water supplies in doubt for many parts of B.C., a woman called in amazement over the way city of Victoria parks staff apparently wastes water.

She cited the Pandora-Johnson area near where she lives, and where some boulevard grass was newly seeded in the spring.

"Going to work at 6:30 this morning, I thought it must have poured all night — the streets were drenched. But when I went home at 2 the water was still running."

How long it had been sluicing away she didn't know, but she didn't think it was necessary to use so much.

No, said the man in the mixer shop of the Yates Street liquor store, you can't buy sugarless gum here any more.

The powers that be have decided, he said, that it's not good for you. No matter that any saccharine ban doesn't arrive until later this year.

Could that be? Could any outfit selling booze have the cheek to decree that sugarless gum is bad for you?

Cheering furiously, Town Talk looked into it and discovered that the Liquor Administration Branch is not that cheeky. Keith Warnes, in charge of such matters with the branch, explained that what such shops and kiosks stock is up to the people who operate them.

For a moment there, we almost swallowed our gum.

Lighthouse philosopher Bill Scott, a card-carrying member of the NDP, has challenged party leader Dave Barrett to a public debate on the question of government funding of private schools.

Scott is for it and Barrett is against it.

"I realize I am only a pawn and Mr. Barrett is a king but you must remember that in chess the pawn must make the first move. That is why I am issuing this challenge. I think my leader is wrong because the teaching is better in private schools than in the public school system."

It's true that in chess a pawn may challenge a king but making a capture, without the aid of larger pieces, is very difficult.

There's a strange example of corporate thinking in a letter from CP Telecommunications to Victoria city council.

Seeking permission for the erection of a 200-foot microwave tower on property at Harbour Road, the letter says the site will be kept clean and in good condition, adding that it should be "an asset to the community."

The inference is that the "asset" lies in the tower's esthetic appeal, rather than its functional efficiency.

Presumably the company has an ingenious method of beautifying or disguising the lofty structure so that it blends harmoniously with its surroundings. How about planting a creeper at the base, for instance?

Ottawa Eyes B.C. Approach to Public Buildings

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The federal government appears interested in B.C.'s "new direction" in the management and construction of public buildings. Public Works Minister Alex Fraser said Monday.

The minister said he was asked to appear before the Senate finance committee recently to explain the province's reasons for setting up the B.C. Building Corp.

He said the federal government has a building and space problem and committee members wanted to find out why B.C. is the only province attempting to solve a similar problem with a new crown corporation.

Fraser was commenting in an interview on a Times story last week quoting several public works employees as saying morale is down because of uncertainty surrounding the splitting up of BCBC.

A union-management committee is holding meetings to work out options for about 800 employees whose jobs will be scrapped and decide, primarily on the basis of seniority, which employees will be offered the 1,000 jobs available in BCBC.

About 300 safety inspectors will remain with the public works ministry.

Fraser said he appreciates the human problems involved in the changeover but added the joint committee is working to ensure that no one is out of work as a result of the move and that those best qualified get the BCBC jobs.

He said he hopes the corporation will be fully operational by April 1, 1978.

As to the employees' complaints* that they have not been kept informed, Fraser said he announced the implications of setting up the corporation last April, just as soon as he had the information.

Fraser justified the creation of BCBC by saying it will provide more accountability by the various ministries as well as cut out some of the fat that accumulated following an accelerated building program by the former NDP administration.

He reiterated that the various ministries now have to pay a month in advance for the office they occupy. Previously, the cost of office space came out of the public works department budget.

"Quite frankly, I think this is going to bring a lot of accountability," he said.

The minister said public works staff was 1,300 in January, 1972, and jumped to 2,200 by 1976 as result of the building program initiated by the NDP.

He agreed that many of the buildings were needed "but no one can expect a government to keep that up for 10 years."

Fraser said consultants worked for eight months on an overall solution to the problem and came up with a Crown corporation which has the authority to borrow $200

RJH NURSE IN TOKYO

'Super Friendly' But Food Terrible

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

The people were great but the food was terrible.

That's the way Pat Macintyre, 20, a second-year student nurse at the Royal Jubilee Hospital, remembers Tokyo after spending eight days in the Japanese capital.

Macintyre and Linda Hughes, a student nurse at Douglas College in New Westminster, represented British Columbia at the recent 16th quadrennial congress of the International Council of Nurses, attended by 10,000 nurses and student nurses from 87 countries.

While the congress was stimulating and a challenge, the strong immersion into Asian life has had an equally strong impact.

The two Canadians were housed with the Japanese contingent at the Tokyo Youth Centre, built as the Olympic village in 1964.

Macintyre reported her first impression of Tokyo's "bullet trains" was "shocking" as she watched professional pushers, paid to pace people in like sedatives in a can.

Her days started early at the centre.

"We'd be awakened up at 6 a.m. with the Japanese national anthem," she said.

"But even before that, the Japanese girls would be outside doing their callisthenics."

"They showed us the ritual and we found it was fun. It's a social event. People gather there to discuss the day's events," she said.

The Japanese, particularly the older ones, tend to look on Westerners with "curiosity and a little bit of suspicion,"

she reported, but they're always "super friendly."

She told how sitting in a subway station trying to figure out where to go on a map was an invitation for a coterie of six or so men to come to her aid, asking "Oh, most beautiful American, can I help you?"
